TA BARBARA, Feb. 1. ...s written in the Santa Barbara Biltmore Hotel, at ie edge of the Pacific. High ountains in the background, alms, live oak trees and flow-rs all along the level shore, nd under your eyes the ocean, s blue as the eyes of a Nordic aby, stretches seven thousand iles across to Asia.

HOTEL men from other parts should see this hotel idea, ne newest, many small houses, uilt in the Spanish mission tyle, around a main building.

You drive from Los Angeles, bout 100 miles, in two and a alf hours, over a magnificent, new and perfect road.

It runs along the ocean's edge, mile after mile. The side of the mountain that comes down to the ocean's edge, had been cut away, leaving a straight wall, hundreds of feet high.

ENTERING Santa Barbara you say to yourself, that it must e about like this inside St. eter's gate. You have passed he oil wells, pumping off-shore n the Pacific, and heaven knows ow much oil there is under at ocean floor. Submarine exloration may tell us.

WITHIN Santa Barbara, commerce seems as far away as e Antarctic. Girls drive big rs. Men strut in polo boots, ll pleased with themselves. And ducks, thousands of m, wild, swim on the lagoon, lt for bird protection and eding, thanks to Senator 's daughter. She gave the y.

AGULLS destroy the eggs and young of wild ducks, in their northern breeding grounds, millions of them. They dive and devour the eggs of the salmon Adult fish, near the spawning grounds, are seen floating aimlessly in shallow water Easily caught, they are found to be blind, both eyes picked out by gulls, not strong enough to get the heavy salmon.

CONGRESS should do something about that, with two S. "If the gulls can be spared n their work as scavangers, the sake of ducks and sal-

That il you have seen Delmonte, u have seen nothing. Californians are like the Ital-ns of Dante's time. Each thinks his principality the one spot worth while. The fact is that every mile on this coast has something that is to be found nowhere else all the way from the palms in the south to the giant fir trees and roaring mountain rivers in the north, it is all a land of wonder.

BUT the object of this trip is still to be told. In Denver ...Bonfils, who owns the ... said: "Who must see Dr ...sum, in Santa Barbara, no-y like him." Nine men in Los ...geles said: "You must see Dr. ...nsun, when you go to Santa ...rbara. Nobody like him." ...re, in Santa Barbara, every-...ody asks, "Have you seen Dr. Sansum? Nobody like him."

THE writer has seen Dr. William David Sansum today, and can testify that there are many doctors unlike him. He knows his business and has added to the world's supply of medical knowledge.

His book, "The Normal Diet," published in St. Louis, by the Mosby Company, should be read by every physician, including those, who like Dr. Sansum, know their work and take it seriously.

FROM him you learn what it means to lack acid in the stomach. At eighty years of age, 80 per cent of men lack it entirely, at seventy years, 70 per cent lack it, without it no complete digestion. You learn why many are too thin, many too fat. The fat are negatively fortunate.

If nature had not distributed their surplus fat in layers, over their bodies, and they had been compelled to eliminate it, they would be dead.

DR. SANSUM treats diabetes with a diet, consisting largely of food usually forbidden. And he can make even a layman understand that it is the right diet. It was Dr. Sansum's scientific advice that enabled the witty Sam Blythe to get rid of 60 surplus pounds in a short time. Blythe wrote a book about it entitled "Get Rid of That Fat."

UNFORTUNATELY Dr. Sansum is overcrowded with ...atients and can undertake no ...ew work until after April first, ...the earliest. So do not come ...re now expecting to see him. Old-fashioned doctors laughed ...the great Pasteur, and re-...sed to admit him to their ...ademy of science. They would ...dmit him now.

Doctors, open-minded, will ...ant to know of the research ...ork that Dr. Sansum has done, ...nd is doing.

CAB GUARD SHOOTS DRIVER

Victim in Hospital; Police Arrest Deputy; Peace Conference Abandoned

Taxicabs were being stopped and drivers and guards searched following the shooting today of a Yellow Cab driver by a guard with whom he was riding in a taxi at the Pennsylvania Station.

James Boone, 38, of 132 Corey avenue, Braddock, was shot in the right foot, police say, by Raymond Johnston, a guard. Johnston told police he was examining his revolver when it was accidentally discharged.

VICTIM IN HOSPITAL

Boone was removed to the West Penn Hospital. Charges of being suspicious persons were lodged against Johnston, Boone and Harry Towley, 38, of 2 Ross street. Police say Towley hid the gun in his pocket after the shooting.

Plans to re-establish cab service at East Liberty Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad this morning were abandoned without explanation after police had assembled squads of men to cope with possible disturbances.

A short time later, after police had started searching drivers, they arrested James English, 43, of Arch street, a driver of a Yellow cab. He was taken from his cab near the company's garage, First avenue and Ross street. Both English and Johnson are charged with being suspicious persons.

PARLEY ABANDONED

A conference tentatively arranged for today between Attorney C. K. Robinson, counsel for the Parmelee Transportation Company, owners of the Yellow and Green Cab companies, and Attorney Leonard A. Mazer, counsel for the strikers, was abandoned without explanation. Officials of two companies denied that they had been asked to the conference, characterized by Mazer as "merely a little talk."

Rumors that a peace parley was imminent were dispelled by statements issued by both Walter S Laird, president of the Yellow Cab Company, and Attorney Robinson.

NO PARLEY ARRANGED

"No conference has been arranged," Laird stated. "The rumor that gave rise to this report grew out of the incident of an attorney for the strikers holding a telephone conversation with the company attorney suggesting a conversation between

Borkowski Case Given to Jury in Franklin County

BULLETIN.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 1.—The case of three former coal and iron police charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of John Borkowski, Tyre miner, went to the jury shortly before noon today.

By JOHN P. COWAN,
Staff Correspondent.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 1.—The fate of Frank Slapikas, Harold P. Watts and Walter J. Lyster, coal and iron policemen, charged with involuntary manslaughter as a result of the death of John Borkowski, is to be decided in a verdict expected today.

Arguments of opposing counsel and the charge to the jury by Judge William M. Parker consumed the morning session of the trial, which began here Tuesday.

"If you believe the Commonwealth's witnesses, then Borkowski was murdered," said Attorney E. C. Coll for the defense, "but the jury in Allegheny County acquitted these boys of murder. Now you hear the testimony largely modified and they ask you to find them guilty of involuntary manslaughter."

"This crime would not have occurred if John Higgins had not gone into the bootlegging business," said Attorney C. B. Prichard. "And where are all the people who were drinking in the house that night—why were they not placed on the witness stand?"

Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk spoke 45 minutes for the prosecution.

Patsy Caruso, the first witness called in rebuttal by the commonwealth, was unable to appear, it being stated that he was seriously ill in a hotel here. His testimony at the former trial was read by Clunk. Mrs. Borkowski, widow of the slain miner, was recalled to identify a pocket knife which was offered in evidence as the weapon with which Watts had been stabbed.

"My husband never carried a knife," sobbed the woman as she shoved the knife from her.

A similar answer was made by her son, John Borkowski, 18, who followed his mother on the stand.

WALES ILL, TRIP CANCELED

JOHANNESBURG, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Illness of the Prince of Wales has forced cancellation of his trip to the diamond mines near here. He is suffering from a slight cold contracted during a visit to the battlefields in this section.

It was stated that the Prince had an ordinary cold, with no temperature, and that his condition was not considered serious.

After rest and breakfast the Prince's cold was much improved. It was expected he would benefit further during the day from the invigorating air hereabout. He played a round of golf with his equerry, Lieut. Col. Piers.

The Prince left Southampton January 3 for Cape Town, from where he planned resumption of an interior African hunting trip interrupted a year before because of serious illness of his father.

Court Relieves M'Govern Of Twins' Guardianship

Mrs. Margaret Seibert, an investigator for Orphans Court, today was named as the guardian of Betty and Joanna Parkes, 16-year-old twins, in place of County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, who had requested that he be relieved.

Judge Edward C. Chalfant also named the Union National Bank as guardian of the $3,000 estate left the girls by their mother, who died last summer.

McGovern informed the court that the twins had been "crucified for political purposes" because he was their guardian. They disappeared a month ago from their Jancey street rooming house. Found two weeks later in a Neville street house they were haled into Morals Court and turned over to their attorney.

BRITISH DROP ANOTHER CRUISER

Action Brings Program of England Within Terms Of Hoover Agreement

By HARRY R. FLORY,
International News Service.

LONDON, Feb. 1.—The British admiralty has canceled plans for another 10,000-ton cruiser, it was learned today, thus bringing Great Britain's navy building program definitely down to 15 cruisers of that type, in accordance with the agreement of President Hoover and Premier MacDonald.

This was revealed in a written reply of First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander to a question put to him in the House of Commons as to exactly what Britain's navy building program was.

The 10,000 cruisers Surrey and Northumberland were definitely canceled the beginning of this week. The latest canceled cruiser was the only one authorized by the government upon which construction had not been begun. Britain now has 11 10,000 cruisers in operation and four more under construction.

PROBLEMS UNSOLVED

While the curtailment of Britain's cruiser building program was welcomed in corference circles today, it contributed nothing toward the solution of the principal problem now before the delegates to the five-power arms parley—the working out of a compromise between limitation by global tonnage or by categories.

As the majority of the chief delegates were enjoying their usual English week-end in the country, technical experts of the various delegations were busy studying the modified French proposal for working basis for a compromise.

When the conference meets as a committee of the whole or so-called first committee again on Tuesday, the written observations of the four other delegations will be submitted on the modified French proposals.

STIMSON PLAN FAILS

The question of how the conference should proceed in its work is causing almost as much difficulty as the question of limitation.

The harmonization of the global and categorical theses was to have been left in the hands of a special committee which Secretary of State Stimson proposed on Thursday, but owing to the British dominion delegates' insistence upon full representation on this committee, this plan was dropped.

Instead, the problem will be discussed by the unwieldy committee as a whole numbering between 50 and 75, which should prove considerably less efficient than the smaller committee proposed by Col. Stimson.

Four members of one family were seriously burned in a gas explosion which damaged a three-story brick apartment at 1011 Fourth street, North Braddock, and shattered windows in nearby houses early today.

The blast occurred in the second-floor apartment occupied by James Wolford, his wife Helen and their children, Jack, 6, and Lucille, 3. Bed clothing and furnishings caught fire.

MILLWORKER HERO

Harry Bechtol, 23, millworker, returning to his home at 408 Stokes avenue, heard the explosion, which blew out second-floor windows of the building.

Rushing into the building, Bechtol encountered Mrs. Wolford in the second-floor hallway.

"My children are in there," she cried.

Bechtol ran into the children's room, extinguished their flaming clothing, carried them out and took them to the Braddock General Hospital in a commandeered automobile.

"retirement" would begin and are already seeking jobs, either within their departments or in other lines of work.

Officers in both departments, when called into the presence of Director Clark, were "asked" to request retirement, under the pension clause which permits this after 20 years' service.

FORCED DOWN OR OUT

"It was retire or be demoted," said one. "Demotion is hard to swallow, so we all took the same course and asked for pensions. The next thing to do is to look for jobs to keep from starving. Our pensions will do little more than pay our rents."

Among the officers retired were some of the best known and considered most efficient in their departments. Many of them are comparatively young men, capable of discharging their duties, they said.

"More efficiency," was given as the cause of the great shakeup, according to Director Clark.

POLITICS BLAMED

"Politics," answered the men separated from the work in which they had spent the best part of their lives.

Reminded that they were protected by Civil Service, Director Clark, they said, admitted the protection.

"I realize I can't discharge you," the director told Fire Capt. Nick Phelan, of No. 2 Engine Company, the captain said to reporters, "but I can demote you. You'd better sign up. No hard feelings on my part, Captain."

Pensions of the "retired" men run from $70 to $85 per month.

SENATE PLANS DRY QUIZ FOR APPOINTEES

Borah's Move to Get Views On Law Wins Support; First Nominee Summoned

By GEORGE E. DURNO,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—A senatorially-applied dry test for all prospective United States attorneys and marshals appeared to be in the cards today as a result for a move by Senator William E. Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, which has received the enthusiastic indorsement of other dry leaders in the upper House.

Borah has already summoned a federal attorney nominee to appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee and state how he stands on the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act. It appeared, judging from the enthusiasm with which the idea was picked up, that in the future all law enforcement nominees would have to place themselves on the right side of the record before confirmation will be accorded them.

DROP MELLON AFFRONT

The proposed senatorial dry quiz shared today's prohibition spotlight with the awaited speech of Representative Frederick R. Lehlbach (Rep.), of New Jersey, in answer to yesterday's defense of the Eighteenth Amendment by Representative Franklin Fort (Rep.), of New Jersey, generally regarded as an administration spokesman. Lehlbach has been given 20 minutes this afternoon and a "wringing wet" address is expected.

Another House move was afoot in the Committee on Executive expenditures, which has recalled the bill transferring prohibition from the Treasury to the Department of Justice in order to erase what is termed an affront to Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon.

The committee had reported the measure out, leaving issuance of industrial alcohol permits in the hands of the Treasury, but had empowered Attorney General William D. Mitchell to make the regulations governing such issuance. At the insistence of Representatives Colton, (R.) of Utah, and Cochran, (D.) of Missouri, Chairman Williamson, (R.) of South Dakota, decided to reconsider.

DRYS BACK BORAH

Dry senators were unanimous in rallying around Borah's move to query potential federal prosecutors and marshals on their prohibition views. Placing them thus on record, it was pointed out, goes much farther than did the admonishing letter recently circulated among his aides by Attorney General Mitchell, and would almost, in effect, be commensurate with giving them a "dry oath" such as was proposed recently in a resolution sponsored by Representative U. S. Stone, (D.) of Oklahoma.

Anti-prohibition Senators, while differing in some respects, indicated they would raise no opposition.

Jacob Walter, nominated by President Hoover to be U. S. marshal for Connecticut, is the man summoned by Borah. Similar summonses probably will go forward to all other nominees for such posts now awaiting confirmation.

The dry view was expressed by Senators Sheppard, (D.) of Texas, father of the Eighteenth Amendment; Caraway, (D.) of Arkansas, and Norris (R.) of Nebraska.

PROPER COURSE

"I think it's a very proper course for the Senate to take," said Sheppard. "I approve of Senator Borah's action."

"Of course it ought to be one of the prime qualifications for the enforcement offices," said Caraway. "A man should not be appointed to enforce a law unless he obeys it. I'd go even further and say he should neither make it nor enforce it unless he obeys it."

these two individuals. However, the officials of the company have no actual knowledge even of this circumstance at present."

Seven cabs were reported stoned yesterday, two of them being attacked at Strawberry and William Penn ways, shortly after 4 p. m. A deputy sheriff riding in one of the cabs was injured when struck by a brick hurled through one of the windows. Another brick went through a window in the Koppers Building.

DRIVERS ARRESTED

Five taxicab company employes, four of them drivers and the other a guard, were arrested late yesterday and lodged in the Central Police Station.

The drivers, arrested on charges of violating a city ordinance, according to police, were Charles Fisher, of 2 Ross street; Anthony Rine, of Uniontown, Pa.; Peter Sternoch, of Republic, Pa., and Robert Paul, of Philadelphia. All were involved in traffic violations police said.

Roy J. Clark, 35, of South Twentieth street, who, police said, was a guard at the Yellow cab garage, was arrested and lodged in the Central Police Station on a suspicious person charge. Clark was alleged to have rented an automobile from a downtown garage last November and to have driven to Cincinnati and abandoned it.

Fine's Tailor Shop Damaged by Fire

Fire early today caused several hundred dollars' damage to Fine Brothers Tailor Shop, 207 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh. Firemen prevented flames from spreading to other stores in the building, a one-story frame structure owned by William Weaver.

BOOST MARTIN FOR GOVERNOR

The candidacy of Gen. Edward Martin for governor was advocated by leaders of the Washington County Republican organization in a conference yesterday with Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong.

Commissioner Armstrong declined to make any comment after the conference, except to say that the visitors presented the candidacy of Gen. Martin for his consideration.

As far as could be learned, no pledge of support was asked or given. Secretary of Labor James J. Davis is reported to be Armstrong's first choice for governor.

C. E. Carothers, Washington County chairman, stated that the visit was made without consulting Gen. Martin, but was part of a movement among his friends who believe he would be the logical successor to Gov. John S. Fisher.

Others in the party were Judge Howard Hughes, John F. Curran, District Attorney Warren Burchinal, County Commissioner Elmer Johnson and George Bloom, secretary of the county committee.

The Washington and Greene County organizations have indorsed Joseph R. Grundy for United States Senator and State Senator Chauncey W. Parkinson for re-election.

Museum Fights to Save Crumbling Sculptures

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Curative methods for saving priceless Gothic sculptures of the Metropolitan Museum of Art from the ravages of bacteria and atmospheric enemies were described by Prof. Colin G. Fink, of Columbia University.

The sculptures, housed at the cloisters in upper Manhattan, where they were brought from France by George Grey Barnard, sculptor, have suffered more deterioration during their 20-year stay in New York, Fink said, than was caused by the storms, earthquakes and conquests of six centuries in France.

The attacking agencies, which are bringing rapid disintegration to stone buildings and statues in all parts of the city, were listed by Professor Fink as bacteria, frost, acids and salt solutions.

Professor Fink, who has been given charge of the care and treatment of the valuable works of art at the cloisters, said his treatment will begin with a careful cleansing to eradicate the bacteria and free salts and acids in the quarter-inch layer of stone that is decomposed. This will be followed by an alkaline wash to give immunity for about a year to attacks of acids. The third stage will be treatment with melted paraffin and bees wax to protect the surface of the stone.

Avalon Youth Wed, Leaves Amherst for Pitt

HOLYOKE, Mass., Feb. 1.—Robert Morris Swaney, a junior in Amherst, took his mid-year examinations yesterday. Next week he will return to his home in Mossley avenue, Avalon, Pittsburgh suburb, and finish his education in the University of Pittsburgh.

BLONDE, DAGUE AWAIT START OF TRIAL

Schroeder Woman Sneers at Accuser's Testimony in Preliminary Hearing

NEW CASTLE, Feb. 1.—Charges of murder, manslaughter, felonious assault and highway robbery clotted out by memories of an afternoon of lovemaking, Irene Schroeder, trigger woman suspect, and her sweetheart, Walter Glenn Dague, were back in the Lawrence County Jail today, looking forward to the day of their trial when once again they might clasp hands and smile at each other—and sneer at those who give testimony against them.

They paid little or no attention to the recital of testimony at their preliminary hearing yesterday.

SNEERS AT ACCUSER

Both looked up in mild surprise when Patrolman Ernest Moore, wounded in the encounter in which Corp. Brady Paul was killed, pointed them out as the slayers.

Irene sneered openly. Dague smiled.

They turned to each other and with a reassuring squeeze of their hands, shackled together, they laughed and snuggled closer together in the crowded courtroom.

Alderman William E. Marshall, after hearing testimony on each charge, ordered them held for the action of the grand jury over the objections of counsel, who moved that insufficient evidence had been introduced to show that either of his clients had shot anyone, or had even been present when that shooting occurred.

Attorneys Kedgewin H. Powell of Youngstown; Thomas W. Dickey, of New Castle, and Benjamin Jarrett, of Sharon, represented them. Former Judge W. T. Barnum, counsel-in-chief for the pair, was not present. Neither was the fifth member of their array of legal talent from two states—Oscar Stevens, an associate of Attorney Barnum.

FOUR WITNESSES TALK

Defense counsel refused to waive reading any of the charges, insisting that because of the gravity of the allegations that a complete hearing be given each of the defendants, charged separately with the various crimes, information for which was sworn to by Lieut. Thomas Boettner, of Troop D, Pennsylvania State Police.

District Attorney John E. Powers and Special Deputy Attorney General Charles Margiotti, representing the commonwealth, asked that this procedure be dispensed with at the preliminary hearing. They were ready with more than a dozen witnesses, however, but called only four.

Those testifying were Howard Kelly, an undertaker, who had Corp. Paul removed to the hospital from a truck which brought him into New Castle from the scene of the shooting; Dr. Paul Wilson, who conducted the autopsy; Patrolman Moore and Ray Horton, from whom the slayers took an automobile in which they made their getaway.

EIELSON'S KIN GIVE UP HOPE

SEATTLE, Wash., Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Bearing the loss of his son with spartan fortitude, Ole Eielson, 66-year-old father of Carl Ben Eielson, was here today after a journey from Hatton, N. D., en route to Alaska to claim the body of the aviator, in case it is recovered from the wreckage of his plane, found last Saturday in a lagoon 90-miles southeast of North Cape, Siberia.

The elder Eielson was met here by W. E. Borland, failer of Mechanic Earl Borland, who was with Eielson on the ill-fated flight from Teller, Alaska, to North Cape last November, which ended when the plane crashed in the Arctic wastes.

Eielson is a banker in Hatton.

Although a crew of nine men was busily engaged today in clearing away ice and snow from wreckage of the Eielson plane they had not found the bodies of either of the fliers.

NEGRO BEATEN, BODY BURNED

OCILLA, Ga., Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Jimmy Irvine, a Negro, accused of attacking and killing a 14-year-old white girl yesterday, was beaten to death and his body burned about 10 miles from here today by a crowd of several hundred persons who had taken him by force from Sheriff W. E. Tyler of Irwin County.

Irvine was captured at Mystic, Ga., after an all-night man-hunt by Sheriff Tyler and his deputies.

Bringing the Negro to jail here, the sheriff was accosted by a crowd in the center of Ocilla. The crowd overpowered the sheriff, he said, in a struggle in which he was injured slightly.

The Negro then was taken to the place where the body of the girl, daughter of a prominent farmer, was found late yesterday. The lynching occurred there.

Sheriff Tyler said the Negro confessed the crime to him upon his capture.

Reports reaching here said that the mob slashed the Negro with knives and beat him, after which a pyre was hastily constructed and the body placed on it. The heap of logs was saturated with gasoline and a match touched to it.

After the lynching the mob quietly dispersed.

Co-Eds Advertise, Inviting Men To Call

NEWTON, Kan., Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Dormitory co-eds of Bethel College are betting that in this modern world where advertising and organization are everything, advertising is the more potent of the two.

Sorority girls have been getting all the desirable men. Residents of the less exclusive dormitories felt the pinch and went into a huddle. The result appeared yesterday in the Bethel Collegian in the form of a display advertisement inviting college men to call at the "dorm hangout."

By way of added attraction, the ad announced, several new card games have been added to the dormitory reception room equipment "and boys are cordially invited to come and participate in these games."

HAS PUNCH YET, SAYS VETERAN

For 27 years Patrolman John C. Pfeuffer walked the same beat in the South Side, around Pius and Mission streets.

Today he has a new one that demands neither club nor uniform. He walks streets of the downtown seeking that rarity—a new job.

He was retired yesterday by the Kline administration along with 105 others. They said he was "too old."

But if you call him "old John," it's your mistake.

He chuckled. Five of his seven children chuckled with him last night in their home in Berkshire avenue, Brookline. He sparred with his son Jerry—"one of the five votes in this house that went for Kline." The younger children only too anxious to drop "night-work" at a pleasant interruption, gathered around.

OFFERS TO BOX KLINE

"Am I old. Say, I'm only 49, and I'll box anyone in Pittsburgh (he winked) including Mayor Kline when he gets back from Florida. Of course, I'd want 40 per cent of the gate," he said.

"Some fellows may think a man of my age fails to remain an efficient policeman. I think different, of course. I believe the department in retiring veterans is losing its one claim to efficiency. There'll never be an efficient force without them.

"I'm not 'sore' at the administration. Five votes in my home went for Kline. I'm young enough to handle any job—that's the way I feel. And I'm going to get one—soon. You know the $70 a month pension is hardly enough to live on. I have four children in school.

"Just how would you divide $70 a month," he inquired jocularly of his wife.

"Well, there's insurance," she began to answer.

"But because I am young and in fine condition I am lucky," he added. "Some of the men forced to retire will have trouble, I guess. Some will find the sledding hard.

SORRY TO RETIRE

"But we're not 'sore.' I'm sorry to retire. I'm good for 20 years more. I wasn't ready to quit policing—until they decided it for me.

"But remember, we're not 'sore'. The kids and me get a lot of good laughs out of life.

"And say, can you imagine them letting out 'Babe Ruth' Costello. How he could swing that night club. He's the only policeman that could handle Soho right."

VICTIONS LOOM IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Failure of city and county to meet payrolls and to pay persons dependent upon the Mothers' Pension Fund has resulted in court orders for the eviction of four mothers and two public employes.

Judge John F. Haas explained that the court orders in each case were unavoidable, but that he had been able to obtain extensions of time from five to ten days for those evicted. Mrs. Sarah Lindon, a social worker attached to the court, told reporters the judge had given money from his own funds to some of the unfortunates.

One of the women dependent largely upon the pension fund was Mrs. Anna Blaha, a widow and mother of three children. She was found by reporters yesterday in her unheated room, walking the floor with a seven weeks' old baby in her arms. She wore mittens and outdoor clothing to keep warm. One of the mothers ordered evicted has four children, another supports five, and the other has three.

GANGMEN KILL 'SQUEALER'

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Julius Rosenheim, 45, formerly an investigator for the Chicago Crime Commission, was shot to death today by two men who stepped from an automobile to the sidewalk and fired six shots into his body. They escaped in the automobile, driven by a third man.

Police said the shooting apparently was gangland's revenge upon the "squawker."

Six weeks ago Rosenheim walked into the states attorney's office. He was on the "in" of vice and gambling in Chicago, he said. He offered to tell what he knew.

The state's attorneys listened, but were skeptical. They ordered him to go out and bring in some of the principals. Rosenheim did not return.

His death today was the penalty for his "double-crossing" of underworld foes and his undercover work as tipster for the Chicago Crime Commission and police raids on gambling houses, authorities said.

BANDITS LOCK WOMEN IN BANK

BERLIN HEIGHTS, O., Feb. 1.—(INS.)—After locking two women employes in a back room, two "gentlemen" bandits leisurely looted the Berlin Heights Bank here today and escaped with cash estimated at approximately $2,000.

The bandits, who were described as "good-looking youths, and well-dressed," fled from town in a small automobile, according to witnesses. They took a road leading to Lorain.

Mrs. Abramovitz and her maid, Anna Watkins, 21, Negro, who narrowly escaped, were crossing Negley avenue when the machine struck Mrs. Abramovitz. Young Gypsy Queen Buried With Weird Ceremonies

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—The nomadic life of a royal gypsy was ended here yesterday and sorrowing kin and followers who carried their 15-year-old princess, Rosa Nichols, to the grave with mystic rites, retired to secrecy and mourning.

Despite guarded efforts of her tribe to give her a funeral such as gypsy tradition dictates, the law imposed stern regulations, and only her relatives and intimates saw the final rites.

The girl died at San Pedro (Cal.) Hospital from typhoid fever, and city health officials refused to permit the gypsies to hold a final funeral with all the attendance, because of the danger of contagion.

At the cemetery plot some distance from the burial. They heard the wailing chants and dirge songs passed down from the ancient Romany tribes. Pans with fire leaping out of them were passed over the grave as the girl's body was lowered to its resting place.

While the grave was covered, fire and water, the potent magic of olden times, were thrown on the new turned earth. Then, crossing themselves devoutly, members of the girl's family and friends, walked silently away.

Woman Freezes to Death, Mate Helpless at Side

HOLLAND, Mich., Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Death came in cruel form last night to Mrs. Ethel Mulder, 50, wife of a farmer living near here.

The woman froze to death within 75 feet of the fire which was blazing in her home, while her husband remained by her side, unable to save her.

The husband, Nicholas Mulder, 68, had gone to the mail box, 75 feet from the house, down an icy grade. He fell and called for help. Mrs. Mulder went to him and, instead of getting him up, fell by his side.

Eventually Mulder managed to crawl to the house. There was no telephone and he shouted for help. None came and he crawled back to his wife with blankets, with which he covered her.

Hours later a boarder, R. Romyn, returned to the farm. He was able to lift the woman, but she was dead.

SPIRALS of aluminum "smoke" and sparkling silver stars that festooned from the central chandelier to the four corners of the room, a giant aluminum figure of "Miss Aviation," hundreds of feet of stencilled airplanes, and a life-size model of Louise Thaden's airplane through which the guests entered the ballroom—all these made up the decorations for the fourth Artists' and Adsters' Friske Frolic given last night in the William Penn Hotel by the Women's Advertising Club.

While there was neither as elaborate nor as general costuming as in former years, some very original ones were worn and the gowning of the women made the frolic a brilliantly colorful affair. The grand march was led by Thomas Stevenson, president of the Variety Club (pinch-hitting for Norman Allderdice who is ill), and the judges were R. B. McDaniel, president of the Pittsburgh Advertising Club; Louis T. Barry, president of the Aero Club; W. M. Jacoby, of the Retail Merchants' Association, and Christian Walter, president of the Associated Artists. A number of theatrical people were present and there were specialty dance numbers by professionals. Victor Saudek's new Knickerbockers furnished the music.

Tables were arranged around the walls and balcony of the ballroom and filled the Urban room, and at each one were all sorts of favors, noisemakers and paper ribbon that added to the revelry both ocularly and auricularly. One particularly attractive spot was the table occupied by Miss Martha Morrison's party, where each guest's place was marked by a sketch of the guest in caricature. A miniature Los Angeles hung above the table, and at the proper moment spilled colored snowballs over it.

Amelia Earhart, Louise Thaden, Fay Gillis, Blanche Noyes and Ruth Nichols were there as special honor guests, their arrival being heralded by an aviator's siren, which was the signal for attention during the entire evening.

And so was established the first aviation scholarship for a woman by women, for that's what the ad women will do with the proceeds of their frolic.

RENUNCIATION of war, arbitration and disarmament were stressed as means to international peace by Lady Clare Annesley in the peace talk which she gave yesterday at the tea in Mrs. Carroll Miller's home. Chatting informally after her speech, Lady Clare said, "The women of England are saying they want their money to be spent on making their own children healthy and happy and not on preparations to blow other people's children to pieces. There is no such thing as self-defense now, for if another war were to come, it would not be a war of battleships, but of the air and the strongest battleship would lie upon the ocean as useless as seaweed."

THE LITTLE FROCK HAS ENGAGING SIMPLICITY

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 1.—The little frock has gained a big place in our affections and our wardrobes. There is an engaging simplicity about these frocks that is in refreshing contrast to the elaborate modes that obtain at night. Do not, however, be misled by artful simplicity, which is so often achieved by intricate detail and clever lines, that need expert handling. The little frock will make a big showing on the Riviera this season, and is especially in demand in the pastel shades that are such a feature of the resort mode. Such delicate shades are in marked contrast to the brilliant hues that splashed the mode last year, and the pale note is extended to beach wear and ensembles. Is this another result of this era of excessively feminine fashions? It will not astonish observers of the mode to see the graceful manipulation of frilled chiffon parasols to keep the sun from tanning lily-white complexions, thus bringing us very far from last year's Bronze Age.

TYPICAL of the successful little frock mode is the delightful dress drawn here which is from the resort collection shown by Martial et Armand. It is of flamingo pink georgette and the simple, high belted back has a small cape back cut with a circular flare. The shirred panels of irregular length are set in at the sides and the back of the skirt and are laid in narrow pleats at the top; the cape back is seen on ever so many of the new frocks and lends animation to the simplest dress.

FOX in various shades continues as one of the most of popular and admired coat trimming both for day and evening wear, and is used with lavish abandon by all couturiers. The afternoon coat is from Maggy Rouff, whose creations are apt to be rich and colorful. The coat is of beige duvetyn and is stitched in self thread on the lower edge and on the turned back cuffs. The coat is slightly fitted at the waistline, no more than a suggestion of the fitted line, however. Two huge beige fox-pelts of slightly darker shade form the luxurious, long scarf collar.

Weather Conditions.

The high pressure area that covered the Mississippi valley yesterday, and which threatened a drop in temperatures over this section, moved rapidly eastward, and is now centered over the Carolinas. It is causing southerly winds from the central plains eastward, and, as a result, rising temperature. A marked low pressure area, centered over the Canadian Northwest, lowest barometer, 29.56 inches, at Edmonton and Calgary, is responsible for rising temperatures over the West. There is no zero weather on the map this morning except north of Lake Superior and no cold weather is indicated for the next several days. Precipitation for the last 24 hours was very light, and was limited to the North Pacific Coast states and to scattered areas of light snow.

River Conditions.

The rivers are stationary. Stage at Franklin is 1.6 feet. Lock No. 7, 12.0; Pittsburgh, 11.4; Dam No. 6, 9.7; Dam No. 8, 8.4; Dam No. 9, 8.2; Dam No. 12, 4.5. The dams are up. There is considerable ice in the river. Dam No. 8 to 11, but does not prevent navigation.

ALWAYS DEAD TIRED?

How sad! Sallow complexion, coated tongue, poor appetite, bad breath, pimply skin and always tired. What's wrong? Chances are you're poisoned by clogged bowels and inactive liver. Take this famous prescription used constantly in place of calomel by men and women for 20 years—Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. They are harmless yet very effective. A compound of vegetable ingredients. They act easily upon the bowels, help free the system of poison caused by faulty elimination and tone up liver. Rosy cheeks, clear eyes and youthful energy make a success of life. DELIGHTFUL GRACE GEORGE IN ERVINE COMEDY IS NEW YORK HIT

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.

WHEN I was in London last summer there was one play that would not be seen. "Nothing for six weeks to come," was the way the urbane man in the box office consoled everybody who wanted to see "The First Mrs. Fraser," in which that London idol, Marie Tempest, was "standing them up." It was the comedy written by St. John Ervine, who had just concluded an engagement as "guest critic" on an American paper. His play had taken London by storm.

George Seibel

Now I have seen "The First Mrs. Fraser," and seen a comedienne who has gradually won for herself in polite comedy a place like that of Marie Tempest in London. Grace George has scored the finest triumph of her career in this production, and has vindicated the taste of the American public, sometimes in doubt, and has shown that New York too can "stand them up" when the right player has the right play.

After sitting in a corner of an upper box to see "The First Mrs. Fraser," who is no relation to "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," I went back to congratulate Miss George on her work in this delicious comedy.

How It Came About

"Tell me," I asked her, "how you found out you could play comedy? There was a time, I remember, when you wanted to draw tears."

"They are closely related, are they not?" said Miss George. "It seems to me that it was Sardou who taught me that. And then I just gradually realized that emotion must have a background, that it is impossible to give the illusion of life with nothing but an umbrella in a rainstorm.

"The art of comedy, to my mind is just a question of characterization that is sincere. With the founding of my own repertory company at the Playhouse a few years ago, in the endless tasks involved in being my own leading lady, in selecting and producing plays that I believed in—I began to grasp the inner soul of comedy. You may want to weep, but you must laugh.

She Has Climbed High

In addition to Cyrienne in "Divorcons," Miss George's gallery of high comedy characterizations now includes Lady Teazle in Sheridan's "School for Scandal," Barbara Undershaft in Shaw's "Major Barbara," and Lady Cicily Wayneflete in Shaw's "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," as well as Langdon Mitchell's "The New York Idea," in which she played Cynthia Karslake.

She has created the delightful Ann Mortimer in Francis Nordstrom's "The Ruined Lady," Ann de Rhonde in Lawrence Eyre's "Merry Wives of Gotham," Helene in Paul Geraldy's "To Love" and Gerry in Geraldy's "She Had to Know."

Both the last-named French plays Miss George herself translated and adapted for the American stage.

The most engaging role of her comedy career is that which Miss George now plays in "The First Mrs. Fraser." As Janet Fraser, forced to unwilling divorce by a husband caught by a pretty face, she gallantly faces her situation, achieves mental independence and develops a sense of humor. With her new-found power and wisdom, Janet is able to extricate her mistaken James from his conscienceless "second," and when he becomes again suitor for his first wife's heart and hand, she sees to it that he woos with pearls. In the airy terms of comedy, there's a deep lesson for all wives in the art of husband-management in "The First Mrs. Fraser," which now I am glad I missed in London last summer, for I am sure Marie Tempest could not have done it so well.

SHOWS OPEN TODAY AND MONDAY

Fritz Leiber, Shakespearean artist, opens his local engagement in the Alvin Monday night and there will be eight different productions given throughout the week. Matinee performances will be offered Wednesday and Saturday. Seats are now on sale for all performances.

In the Nixon Monday night Otis Skinner will appear for the first time in his new play, "Papa Juan." The action of the drama takes place in an atmosphere of Spanish rural life.

The George Sharp Players will present "Jonesy" in the Pitt next week. It will serve to introduce the company's new juvenile, Henry Wadsworth.

FILM OF JUNGLES

"Jango," picture of African life, opens an engagement in the Gayety today. Two performances will be presented daily. The picture was made in conjunction with a scientific expedition. Three white men started out with it. But one returned.

"Hell's Heroes," a drama of three bad men who find themselves in care of a young orphan, opens today on the Harris screen. There will be a new stage show with Victor Graff in charge.

MUSICAL PICTURES

Only 16 of every 300 applicants land chorus girls' jobs in talking pictures, according to Sammy Lee, noted revue producer, who directed the dancing ensembles for "Chasing Rainbows," new musical movie which comes to the Penn Monday. Charles King and Bessie Love are featured.

"Hit the Deck," based on the stage musical play of that name, opens today in the R K O Sheridan Square. Jack Oakie and Polly Walker are co-featured.

"General Crack," the first all-talking film of John Barrymore, is being seen for a second week in the Warner.

Charles Farrell, co-featured with Janet Gaynor in the Fox musical comedy "Sunny Side Up," which opens its fourth week in the Aldine Monday, grew up in an atmosphere of the theater. His father owns three theaters in Massachusetts. After finishing college, Charles joined a vaudeville troupe and later went to Hollywood.

DEAD OR ALIVE THE MOVIES GET YOU

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

With a keen poker face William Powell deals out the dramatics in "Street of Chance," all-talk film which opened yesterday in the Stanley. It is a picture of big-time gambling—a picture that calls to mind the Arnold Rothstein killing down in the (after all) not-so-gay New York.

Well, giving credit where credit is due the film-makers read their newspapers. And dead or alive the movies always get their man.

The picture has a dual theme. It presents a gambler's efforts to get back on a harmonious footing with his wife and also details his efforts to prevent a younger brother from following his footsteps. And, you know what younger brothers are!

THAT YOUNGER BROTHER

Anyway, in the picture story, a younger brother goes in for the gambling racket. And this leads to terrific complications. All set for setting out on a second honeymoon with the wife, our gambler extraordinary finds himself breaking tryst with her and going to save said younger brother from a life of gambling. In doing this—silly though it appears—he plays the first crooked cards in his life with the result that some of the boys plan to say it with bullets. And they do. The moment comes when Hero staggers out of a big hotel. It seems a piece of lead has found a home. Blood spurts and he collapses. And here is the Rothstein complex.

Regis Toomey, who used to make dramatic declamations out in Peabody High School, has the younger brother role. And he does it well, very well. He plays poker and takes a bath—like a veteran. Kay Francis, as a gambler's wife, and Jean Arthur as a younger brother's wife, are two women who win our sympathy—if not by their emoting, by their lot in life.

In spite of the flashing of thousand dollar bills—bellhops being tipped from the same "rolls" that pay off big-money debts—the picture is melodramatically good. And the newspaper headlines have told us it is life.

SOME LOCAL TALENT

Getting to the stage show—titled "Now and Then," which we did after a 20-minute delay at the opening performance yesterday—we cite the Ward Sisters, local girls, . . . one of the features. Cut out of their big exhibit a Bowery number by the tardiness of the show, they appeared in an opening selection that gave promise of finer things to come. As for the show itself, it is divided into two portions. One is in the modern style, the other in the old opery house manner. The latter half, when we saw it, was funny enough, in a burlesque way, though it had its vulgar moments.

Before the stage show, which won Dick Powell applause and a certain juvenile dancer a lot of praise, the audience grew careless. It went in for impatient applause and weird noises. All of which caused a big policeman to come down an aisle and escort a tiny fellow to the exit. Which isn't our idea of heroism. But, nevertheless, it came under the head of Amusement.

QUESTION BOX CONDUCTED BY STAR

Bert Lytell, noted stage and screen star, appearing in the Nixon in the legitimate stage drama, "Brothers," today answers more questions that have been asked him by Sun-Telegraph readers. The replies follow.

Harry A. Finch—Yes, commercially so, for the time being the talkies are hurting the stage. But eventually no! The discriminating theatergoing public always will prefer to see and hear the actors, as they do their friends, in the flesh.

M. S.—Can't recall the villain you refer to. Don't know any Saterfield. Can't answer your question about Norma Talmadge, it is too personal.

REAL LIFE DRAMA IN MOVIES INVOLVES COURT FIGHT OVER $10,000

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright, 1930, By Premier Syndicate.)

HE was told if he wanted anything: "Fight us!" And so Edmund Goulding, w. k. writer, composer, and director, has accepted the battle verdict of Gloria Swanson and Joseph P. Kennedy. Through his attorney, Milton Cohen, preliminary formalities have been exchanged. The seconds are out of the ring. The fight is on.

Behind this fight looms one of those condensed dramas that at rare intervals send the picture-pulses hammering. And this is the story, as Goulding tells it.

Goulding was engaged by J. P. Kennedy (head of Pathe) and Gloria Swanson to direct the sound sequences in "Queen Kelly." Deciding this type story not up his alley, Goulding suggested it would be cheaper to make a new picture with the money necessary to spend on salvaging "Queen Kelly." That inasmuch as he had been drawing salary and had done nothing to actually earn it, he would give them this new story of his gratis. The story was "The Trespasser." It was accepted and shot in 18 days, a record for a Swanson offering. During the making of the picture, Goulding composed a theme song, "Love Your Spell is Everywhere."

Gloria Swanson

"The Trespasser" was completed. Miss Swanson departed for Europe. Likewise Mr. Kennedy. Goulding was parked with Pathe Kennedy, prior to leaving Hollywood, had Eddie Fays promise him to make a deal in New York with the publishers for the song. One day says Goulding, when he was busy at the studio, officials came to him with two contracts. One was for the release of "The Trespasser," the other, for the release of the song.

Been In Theater Since Age of Nine

NOW let me pause here long enough to point to the startling fact—perhaps the main fact—that Eddie Goulding has been in the theater since he was 9; in motion picture, as writer, scenarist and director, since he was discharged from the Army, 11 years ago. That during these many years, he says, he had never had a contract. He worked with stars and companies via verbal agreements, and "there had never been misunderstandings."

Hence, Goulding signed the contracts placed before him at Pathe "in good faith," he declares. Kennedy was making the deal for the song for him in New York, he says he understood. Later, however, he discovered that in signing the second piece of paper he had made the whole song, with all royalties, etc., over to Miss Swanson and Kennedy!

While Miss Swanson and Kennedy were in Europe, Goulding made another picture for Pathe, "The Grand Parade," with Helen Twelvetrees and Fred Scott. Eddie wrote the story, the music, and directed. Miss Twelvetrees and Scott, because of their good performances, were placed under contracts that spell do-re-me.

Well, Gloria and Mr. Kennedy arrived in New York. Goulding went to discuss a new story for the star. Goulding also asked about the royalties on his song and the ten housand bonus that he says had been promised him on the Pathe deal. It was made clear to him, he asserts, that if he remade "Queen Kelly" as an operetta he would get his bonus, half the royalties and three thousand dollars a week salary until March 1. That was in the early part of this month.

No 'Queen Kelly' For Mr. Goulding

GOULDING READ the new "Queen Kelly" script written by Lawrence Eyre and Laura Hope Crews, ran the picture that had been re-cut, and declared, he now claims, that he wouldn't touch the job. Varied opinion is what makes horse-racing, but a different note seeped into the dealings 'twixt our three principals, according to Goulding's charges. He says he was informed that he would do their picture or he would sacrifice his song royalties and his $10,000 bonus. To get this, he would now have to fight.

So the above mentioned lawsuit is now on the legal tapis, and the three principals squaring off for the combat.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.

WASHINGTON was blanketed in twelve inches of snow, but that did not prevent President Hoover from dressing warmly and tossing the medicine ball around for ten minutes. It is rumored the President tried to appoint a committee to exercise for him. Democratic propaganda.

Speaking of Washington—and why not?—A committee of sixty, representing partriotic organizations, are today urging Congress for a revision of the music of "The Star-Spangled Banner." They claim that there are too many high notes in the present song. Listen to an old Ziegfeld singer—there's nothing wrong with the music—what we need is for every American to know the words of "The Star-Spangled Banner," as well as he knows "Singing in the Rain."

A former Hungarian army officer, now in Berlin, is puzzling all the doctors. Through an accident in the war, something happened to that part of the nerve center which controls sleep. This gentleman has not slept in fifteen years. Spends twelve hours out of the twenty-four in night clubs. What a companion for one of our show girls—and what a customer for Texas Guinan! Specialists have tried everything known to medical science to put him to sleep but without success. Why not send him to Washington to spend a session in Congress?

ENRIGHT GOES SOUTH FOR DIVERSION

By HOWARD L. BROWNING

The Warner brothers have jumped the Enright Theater across the Mason-Dixon line for a week, with a cotton wharf for a stage and a movie that transplants Tin Pan alley to a Georgian plantation.

Setting the color scheme for the stage presentation, "Shuffle Yo' Feet," the Black Cat Four who terpsichore in a big way. A beautiful show to tap dancing, some good tumbling, and a touch of the Charleston, contribute to the act. Tyler Mason, blackface comedian, does two good songs after Al Jolson. "Singing in the Rain" is the better of them. With the exception of the always-good Enright chorus, and an improving Jay Mills, the rest of the stage show isn't above the average. The orchestra contributes the only lemon with its opened, "Lonesome Road" from "Show Boat," which they ruin.

With all the trimmings of plantation hands, Negro spirituals, huge colonial and Georgian mansions, Billie Dove does herself proud on the screen in playing Octavus Roy Cohen's story, "The Other Tomorrow."

While Miss Dove contributes an armful of love and sex appeal, a former Pittsburgh boy makes himself into a very obnoxious villian. Not an ape man and not a foreigner, Kenneth Thomson is very civilized and very jealous. You'll hate him as a villian, but like him as an actor. He does better than the hero, Grant Withers, who has a part that might have come right out of the "Rover Boys."

The movie, an all-talkie, is all about a girl who marries the wrong man. When the girl insists on continuing her friendship with the rejected hero, her husband-villian becomes jealous. In the end a sheriff shoots poor Thomson, so that the hero won't have a bad conscience for the rest of his life.

The Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Todays question: For the first time in its history a dance has been held in the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. Do you approve?

MILDRED STRUM, South Hills, stenographer: "I certainly do. Nothing is wrong with dancing, even though a few people who look for evil in everything say there is. Boys who belong to Y. M. C. A., organizations are red blooded fellows and like dancing as much as anybody else. The East Liberty "Y" is perfectly right."

Miss Strum

JEAN EPSTEIN, South Side, stenographer: "There are loads of churches that hold dances in their auditoriums, so I can see no harm in any Y. M. C. A. permitting dancing in their building. It is almost a necessity to have dances in order to hold the interest of the members. If it's a sin to dance it's a sin to walk gracefully."

Miss Epstein

MARIE FITZPATRICK, Carrick, stenographer: "When a precedent is broken much talk results, especially where young people are concerned. I know little about the East Liberty "Y" but I do know an occasional dance will be enjoyed by its members and friends. Then again, dancing is considered one of the best exercises a person can take."

Miss Fitzpatrick

DAISY MASIKER, Carrick, clerk: "Young men, like young women, love to dance. If they are not permitted to dance in their clubs or social organizations they will do it in some hall. In my opinion it is far wiser to allow them to "throw" a properly supervised dance than force them to frequent cabarets and night clubs."

Miss Masiker

HELEN BONYAK, Carrick, stenographer: "I approve of dancing in the East Liberty Y. M. C. A., if the boys are good dancers and hire good bands. A lot of boys' clubs and organizations make a dance one wild scramble. A little exciting music, soft lights and nice girls won't disrupt the morals of anybody, especially young fellows."

Miss Bonyak

PATRICIA PEIFFER, North Side, secretary: "Its about time the East Liberty Y. M. C. A. is waking up to the fact that dancing is a real pleasure and a healthful exercise. There is no harm in attending a decent dance with the right people. I bet the membership of the East Liberty Y. M. C. A., will increase now that dancing is permitted."

Will Rogers Says:

S. S. ILE DE FRANCE, Feb. 1.

I WAS sentenced to the disagreement conference for duration of its existence, but I got time off for good behavior and am now out here on the ocean on the great French boat, the Ile de France.

Not only can't speak French, but can't even pronounce the name of the boat. Going to be a lot of guessing games on when I feel well enough to go into the dining room (which hasn't been yet).

Me and this ocean just don't get along, that's all there is to it. Next year's disarmament conference got to be held in Claremore. Our team at the conference looked awful good. They had been holding skull practice among themselves every day. They are working up a lot of defensive plays among them to offset the trick plays of some of those other teams. Stimson is about the best choice we could have made unless we could have got Knute Rockne to go. Good night, I got to lay down.

Yours,

WILL.

DAILY TRUE STORY

The Man on the Wall

Convict Saves Guard From Being Shot During Prison Riot

THERE was a man on the wall, walking back and forth and carrying a gun.

There was another man in the prison yard, walking back and forth.

He, too, carried a "gun"—not a carbine such as the uniformed guard on the wall was carrying, but an automatic.

There were, of course, many other prisoners in the yard. And more men on the high walls.

But this particular man on the wall stared moodily down at that particular prisoner in the yard, who was armed. The man on the wall didn't suspect that he was armed, but probably 20 of the other prisoners knew it and half of them were also armed or had a weapon cached some place, ready for the coming emergency.

There was something that only those two men knew—the guard on the wall and the prisoner in the yard—and that was that they were brothers!

These guards shifted about in their duties. They took turns. At times they occupied the watch towers or paced the wide walls at places where this was necessary. At other times they went inside for duties and others took their place.

In cold weather this was a relief for the wall men when it was their turn inside. In hot weather it was a relief for them to get out on the wall.

At this time it was cold weather.

Mike Harris had been a truck driver. When there was a strike in the big plant where he worked and no trucks were stirring they put him on duty at the winding room where women worked.

Some of the men on strike called him a scab and other names, but Mike's sister worked in the winding room. One girl had already been severely hurt by a striker. Mike did not consider it strike-breaking to protect the girls from injury.

Brother's Warning

Mike had plenty of troubles. His mother was sick and his brother, Pete, was no good.

Worse than that, Pete was an out-and-out crook.

He had already done time—under the name of Grig Hooley. He had sense enough not to shame his old mother by giving his right name.

Mike had been up to see Pete just once. He gave him ten dollars of his hard-earned coin for tobacco money.

"I told Ma you was in Detroit—get me?" said Mike.

"Aw, right—is 10 all you got? A guy has to pay high for privileges here—"

"Listen, brother or no brother, his ten bucks was earned honest—you never earned an honest dime. If it wasn't to warn you not to let Ma know what a low crooked bum you are I wouldn't come near you, and when you get out you get a job or I'll beat you up three times a day until you do—I ain't goin' to have Ma know—Nora is wise an' she cried her eyes out, nearly."

"Yes, quit preachin', Mike," said Pete.

"Pat heard what I said."

Command was long before the tion Custie Harris, known as Grig Hooley, had served his time and got out. He had come home for a bit and then drifted away.

When some of the strikers tried to rush Mike and others so as to get in and demolish the winding room, Mike had put up a fight that was a wonder.

But the owners of the plant got cold feet and shut down indefinitely, so Mike got his sister Nora a better job in a restaurant and then took the job offered him, a guard at the prison. The warden's brother had chanced to see Mike fight and recommended him for the job.

Two Brothers Meet

Mike's mother had gone to live with Nora, who had married a nice, steady chap. She loved Mike, as a mother should but constantly mourned the continued absence of "Poor Petey."

Not for worlds would Mike or Nora have let their mother know that "Poor Petey," as Grig Hooley, was "mugged" and in the rogues' gallery, that he had served time and was already wanted for some more stick-up jobs.

Mike had been working as a guard about four years when he happened to be on duty inside as a new batch of prisoners were coming in.

That was nothing unusual—some came and others went, daily.

But suddenly Mike got a glimpse of one of the new prisoners and he suddenly felt weak—and also ugly.

Mike stood and glared at this man, his own brother. He was helping book them.

"Name?" he said.

Pete Harris looked up then, he knew the voice. He seemed to cringe. He didn't know before that his brother was a guard at this prison. He wet his dry lips with his tongue.

"Grig Hooley," he said.

The clerk took it down.

"What's this?" another officer asked.

"Aw, I give a phoney monicker when I was down below. I thought I'd best give it right here—my right name is Hooley," Pete said.

Mike saw the papers. It was a shock to him—15 to 20 years his brother had this time.

When the time came, which was within a few days, Mike found a way for a talk with Pete.

"Listen to me, you," said Mike. "I got a good job here. If they are wise I'm your brother they will let me go—they can't let you go."

"Aw, hell, I wouldn't have any of th' boys know I had a brother who was a guard here—it's a disgrace," snarled Pete.

It is a wonder Mike didn't sock him then.

No Favors From Him

"One more thing," said Mike, "you don't get no favors from me, not half so much as if we was strangers—and if you think you can make any break to get out I'll drill you like I would any other guy—is that clear?"

"And if I had a chance to make a break and you was in my way I'd croak you so sick you'd never know what hit you—you big hunk of cheese," growled Pete.

"Then that's clear," said Mike.

From that time on he never spoke to Convict 2714, except upon such rare occasion as when it was necessary, like when Pete's lawyer came up once and Mike was on duty in that corridor and had to bring him to the room, or like the time in the brush factory when Mike prodded Pete with his carbine and said, "Twice is enough to tell you to can the talk—next trip means down below."

Pete was more careful. Solitary on bread and water is no particular treat.

Mike had one day off each week. He got a night train, visited his mother and sister and went back to the job. Whenever his mother took to bemoaning the protracted absence of her "Poor Petey," Mike would say, "Like as not he's up in Canada in a lumber mill, he was no hand with a pen, Ma—he'll be all right."

But it wasn't the most cheerful thing in the world for a man to mount guard in the tower of a high stone wall and look down on his younger and only brother in prison garb, marching out, wandering around like something in a trap and marching back again.

And back of all this was another torturing thought — suppose in some way his mother found out that Grig Hooley, in that prison, where her boy Michael stood ready to shoot down any man who tried to escape, was really her other boy, her "Poor Petey?" What would his mother say? The shock would likely kill her.

Mother Dies

Then came a time when Mike got two days off. His mother had died.

"Shall you tell him?" his sister Nora whispered to him.

"I don't know—ain't he in enough hell now?"

"Th' remorse might help him when he gets out," she said.

Nora went away for a cry.

Mike went out to the kitchen and had a drink with some of the kindly neighbors.

When he went back on the job he thought that Pete kept stealing glances at him. Would Pete have missed him, he wondered, just those two extra days.

And for the first time in those years, Convict 2714 spoke to Guard Harris.

Out of the corner of his mouth, without a movement of his lips, after the age-old manner of convicts, he asked, "What's up?"

Mike had decided not to tell Pete, but somehow he couldn't help saying one word, "Ma."

His brother stared at him. They were filing out.

Mike motioned him sharply to move on.

Pete moved on.

Mike didn't sleep well that night.

He should have told Pete nothing, or more.

The next day Mike got his chance.

"She died easy, no pain," said Mike, "and she sent you her love—wherever you might be—get me?"

Pete was somewhat human, after all. He chocked a little and nodded.

"God," he said.

"'S helluva time to be sayin' that—now," muttered Mike.

"Aw' right—now I don't give a damn, she can't know, no matter what happens," said Pete glaring at Mike.

"Whaddye mean?"

"Nuttin'," lied Pete.

It was six months after this, and cold weather had set in, before the big riot in this prison broke loose.

It happened in the wood-turning shop. Mike was in the bristle shop. There was noise seeping through, the men were getting uneasy—a few of them stood up from their benches.

Mike in his corner and a chap named Webster in his booth stood up on their stools.

"Set down or get drilled," said Mike.

"It's a fire," some one whimpered; "we'll get burned out!"

"Set down—I'll put you out quicker with this," ordered Mike, but he never took his eyes from Convict 2714.

The men sat down again.

"Keep busy," ordered Mike. He was senior guard in the room and did the talking.

Brother's Black Looks

The man pretended to work, but there was uneasiness. There was a mumbling. Mike's brother picked up bristles and put them down again, eying Mike all the time.

The noise from the wood-turning room subsided. Another guard and the warden himself looked into the bristle room. He saw Mike and the younger guard on the stools, guns in readiness.

He looked questioningly at Mike. Mike made a slight jerk of his head, outward, which meant that he believed they ought to be locked up until the excitement died down.

"Lock them up, Harris," said the warden.

The men were marched out and to their cells.

It was a black and murderous look that Convict 2714 gave to his brother Mike.

A month went on. It was given out that there was no riot, only a slight accidental fire and that the men behaved well. Inside the prison they knew better.

Mike was in the tower by the gate when the big riot broke. This time it was a sure enough fire, in the bristle room and storage room back of it. No one knew how many of the convicts were armed.

The shooting increased. Every man on the wall awaited a signal and stood ready to shoot the first convict who emerged.

One lone convict came out the door to the right followed by the captain of the day guard. The convict knifed him and he fell. Mike dropped the emergency rope and slid down, ran across the yard about half way as the captain and convict were struggling and then he dropped the convict with a single shot.

By this time the mob came through the truck doors.

"Big Mose" was in the lead—he had some guard's carbine and when he saw Mike he halted, knelt and took aim.

"Not him!" yelled a voice, knocking the carbine aside.

It was Convict 2714 who had prevented Big Mose from drilling Mike. He picked up the carbine.

"Drop, you fool!" he yelled at Mike.

A bunch of guards who had overpowered a crowd inside came running out. Mike jumped over to his brother and faced the mob.

Some fell and the others ran back through the wide truck doors.

"This guy is right—he helped me," Mike said to the men who had run up and grabbed Pete, then he dropped. He had been badly wounded.

It was two years later that the man on the wall saw a citizen leave the prison. He waved up to the tower.

The citizen had formerly been Convict 2714. For bravery and loyalty he had been paroled.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Are You Too Thin?

IN the present-day fashion of trying to keep thin, it is perhaps begging the question to say "Are you too thin?" But I believe there are many today who are too thin.

DR. COPELAND

Fashions of dress today, for both men and women, dictate whether to be thin or not to be thin. In consequence, many are writing for advice.

One person may take all the food he wants and does not put on any weight, while another may go hungry, just to be thin. Why is this?

There are other factors than food that govern the weight. The amount of exercise, the activity of the ductless glands—those mysterious glands that have so much to do with the health of the body—the quantity of oxygen in the blood—all these have to do with one's weight.

A quiet and placid person is far more likely to take on flesh than an active person. Many thin persons are nervous, their feet and hands are never still, they fidget and fuss. They are perfect examples of perpetual motion.

Fat producing foods are also energy-producing foods. By taking starchy foods, sugar to excess and fat foods, we add to the body fat. The extra fat not needed for body requirements is added as fat to the body.

The more energy you waste, in activity of any sort, even fussing and fidgeting, the more the surplus of your body fat is reduced. This may produce a deficit of fat in the body. That is what happens to the over-thin person.

Most thin people do not breathe deeply. You cannot be well-nourished unless you have an abundance of oxygen in your lungs. Try deep breathing and a habit of always breathing deeply if you want to be healthy and normal in weight.

If there is anything the matter with your ductless glands your physician will know. These glands are being understood better and better as time goes on, and the medical profession now realizes their great importance to the well being of man.

One must have the proper quantity of well chosen food in order to maintain good health. Cream, butter, nuts, starchy foods and other fat-producing dishes will add to your chance of becoming plumper, but you will have to find out just what foods are best for your digestion.

An abundance of sleep and plenty of rest, even though you are not sleeping, will help to restore the flesh. To be quiet in bed in a well-ventilated room will help a lot.

Without oxygen, the food will not feed the body any more than fuel will burn and heat the home without plenty of air under the fire box. The matter of breathing is more important in the taking on of flesh than is the matter of food.

Harry Informs Georges of Threat Carried in 'Arrow Note'

BOTH my husband and Harry Underwood looked at me oddly as I protested against showing to Prince Georges the note which had been hidden beneath the arrow. It was a look which comes to the faces of men who feel that it is futile to expect a woman to see a masculine viewpoint. I also have seen it on the faces of women trying to explain their point of view to men.

"But it is Georges' right to know about this," Dicky said at last. "He is not a child. Instead he is within a few days of a throne."

"If those fiends do not get him," I said rebelliously, then added contritely, "My apologies to you both. I know there's no question of that, but—"

"Thanks for the vote of confidence," Harry Underwood drawled. "We're going to hope for the best. But that doesn't alter the fact that Georges must get in on this. Come on, there's no use staying on here any longer. It's evident the arrow wasn't shot from any of these bungalows, for your search of this last one, Lady Fair, disposed of our last doubt. Are you sure that you didn't make a mistake as to the spot the arrow landed?"

"I have been sure until now," I returned despondently. "But after my experience in there—"I looked toward the bungalow of the elderly woman I had interviewed—" I am not sure of anything."

"You're not alone in that psychological state," Mr. Underwood commented. "But there's no use dwelling upon it. We've got enough on our minds without holding post mortems. Give this little girl a hand, Dicky-bird. She needs it."

He put his hand underneath my arm, grinning down at me companionably. My husband hanged himself on my other side, and the two men rushed me downstairs with a touch of burlesque which I was sure they had brought out for my especial reassurance.

"You or Lil will have to be the one to disturb that royal tete-a-tete in our apartment," Harry Underwood told me when we were back in the living room. "It takes feminine tact for that, and—"

"Your wife absolutely refuses," Lillian interposed promptly. "You left 'em in there, Madge, now you collect Georges."

"The only tact I shall use will be a rap upon the door," I told them, smiling. "Then I shall deliver what message?"

"Ask Georges to come over for a few minutes. It won't do Olina any harm to be left all alone for a little. She'll have time to invite her soul for a session. Perhaps she'll find out what she really wants."

"Perhaps," I said as I left the room. But I really felt far more certain of Olina's reactions than my enigmatic word indicated. I did not know the state of Prince Georges' mind, but Olina's had been nearly an open book to me ever since the betrothal dinner, when she involuntarily had cried out "No!" to the announcement of Mary's betrothal to Prince Georges.

But when the young prince answered my knock with prompt courtesy, I saw that his face mirrored the same tense excitement that was in Olina's. There had been a momentous interview, I guessed, even though a fine sense of honor doubtless had kept them from full revelation of their doubts and anxieties. But the atmosphere was electric.

"Mr. Underwood would like to see you in our apartment for a few minutes." I told the young prince. "He wishes to confer with you upon an important development."

Princess Olina sprang to her feet.

"Georges!" she said tensely "Promise me!——"

The last words were but breathed, and the next moment the princess triumphed over the frightened girl.

"I really do not know what I am saying," she told us both with a charming smile and regained poise. "This is all so upsetting. I suppose I meant to ask you to tell me all about the conference and what is happening, but of course you must not unless Mr. Underwood wishes. I am going to read for awhile and forget all about this."

She made a pretty airy gesture of farewell as Prince Georges escorted me from the apartment with the touch of formality which generally invests his actions. But I knew, and guessed that the young prince shared my knowledge, that it was not for the appeasement of her curiosity that she had uttered that tense "Promise me!"

Harry Underwood wasted no time in preliminaries, when Georges came with me into the living room. He gestured to seats and drew from his pocket a paper which I recognized as the one which had been twisted around the arrow.

"This thing comes from your friends of the Kenellos," he said. "I'll read it to you, as I translated it."

"'You cannot outwit us,'" he began, "'with all your precautions, for we are desperate people who care not one coin for our lives. If we die others will take our places. So if you wish to avoid bloodshed and torture for the young ladies—'I'm interpreting that mildly," Mr. Underwood said grimly, "'you will see to it that Prince Georges comes alone to his room tomorrow night and goes quietly away from the hotel with the man who will meet him there. He will not be killed in the hotel. He will not be killed at all if he will comply with certain requests of ours which will be put to him when he is safely away from the hotel, and out of reach of any of his friends. If he agrees to the following directions, there will be an end of this business. If not, he would better imprint a sweet farewell kiss upon the lips of both the young ladies of whom he is so enamored—for——'"

Two things interrupted the reading. Prince Georges' sprang to his feet with a wild protest, and the telephone rang. Mr. Underwood crumpled the letter and strode to the telephone, throwing a crisp command over his shoulder to the excited young prince.

"Slam on the brakes!" he said. Then he took up the receiver and listened intently.

"All right," he said at last. "Just see that the schedule isn't interrupted."

He hung up the receiver and turned to us.

"I told you it was about time for us to move," he said. "The real 'killer whale' is back again, has just called for his key. Now we'll get busy in earnest."

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 2

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds promise of active and intriguing conditions in affairs generally, but which may be attended by hazard as well as personal inharmony, friction or dejection. There may be tenacious obstacles to success but with matters persistently and diligently manipulated there is some promise of expansion, stability and financial satisfaction. Much will depend on personal acumen, patience and resolution.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of sudden and unplanned changes of importance; and while there is a sign of progress and prosperity there is also financial peril, setback and obstacles unless rigid effort, patience and good judgment be exercised.

A child born on this day may be restless and unsettled and may have to wring its success from overcoming obstacles and by its own perseverance, application and determined effort.

Monday, February 3

THE astrological forecast for this day holds probability of a sudden and unforeseen change with the accent on mystical, psychological or creative lines out of the ordinary. It is a favorable time for pushing these affairs constructively and making new contracts for their promotion.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which unusual interests may engage their attention or old matters may assume intriguing phases. But all should be practically pushed, with attention paid to solid promotion of even spectacular or out-of-the-ordinary projects.

A child born on this day may be endowed with talents and powers out of the usual run of mediocrity, and it may be enterprising and successful in promoting these advanced faculties

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Married Lifers

"THE older you grow the less you know about life," remarked Mrs. Green as she passed the cigarettes and the bonbons simultaneously.

* * *

"And the less sure you become that you know ANYTHING," agreed Mrs. Divot, foolishly reaching for a sweet.

* * *

"Once," continued Mrs. Green, "if you had told me that easy divorce was not a good and wholesome thing I should have called you a moron. I believed in modernism, trial marriage and a quick and painless surgical operation the moment the ties began to chafe."

* * *

"And then, some!" admitted Mrs. Green. "But, when I see all the matrimonial wrecks scattered around me, and read of these two-year-trial, 'love-me-and-leave-me' marriages, I'm inclined to go frowsily mid-Victorian. Look at Russia, for instance—where the only grounds you have to offer for divorce is that you are MARRIED!"

* * *

"Well, I'm looking at it. What about it?" asked Mrs. Divot cheerfully.

* * *

"There's at least one divorce for every marriage over there, according to statistics," stated Mrs. Green. "And the women are rising to protest bitterly, at the ease with which the men junk the old wife for a new one, every time they see a more attractive model. Russia is getting to be the big 'EX-WIFE' country!

* * *

"All the young men and women are born pessismists, and imbibe cynicism with their oatmeal and spinach. Maxim Gorky receives so many letters from them asking what it's all about and what life and love amount to, that he has had to answer them en masse."

"In Russia," averred Mrs. Devot, "I should say that life and love amount to about thirty kopeks!"

* * *

"On the other hand," continued Mrs. Green, "when I glance around among my friends, I've discovered that all the happily married couples, I know are those who, because of creed or code or prejudice, don't BELIEVE in divorce—the ones who regard marriage as a life-sentence!" * * *

"Married LIFERS!" exclaimed Mrs. Divot. "Come to think of it that WOULD make a man and a woman think long and seriously before rushing to the altar."

* * *

"Exactly!" said Mrs. Green. "It makes them more cautious about choosing a life-partner, beforehand—and a lot more patient about adjusting themselves to each other and more anxious to preserve the entente cordiale, afterward! And, after all, that's all that it takes to make a successful marriage—choosing the right partner, and standing BY!"

* * *

"The trouble with most of these 'experimental' marriages is that they rush into and out of them, as though they were a revolving door. They don't give their marriage time to JELL! Whereas the 'lifers,' after the first few years of storm and stress and adjustment, seem to GROW together, so that not even the law could pry them apart!" * * *

"Funny!" said Mrs. Divot, "how we try all the new theories in love and medicine—and then get right back to grandmother's remedies and the kind of marriage that mother used to make!"

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Wedding Attendants

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am going to be married at home, with just my family present and the groom's family. Is it proper to send them written invitations?

2. In sending out announcements to friends is it proper to send them about two weeks before the wedding or a day or two after the wedding?

DOTTY.

IT will be enough, in this case, when you are inviting only the families, to invite them by word of mouth. But, if you prefer, you can write notes of invitation.

2. Announcements are sent out after the wedding, when it can be announced that the ceremony has been performed. If possible—and it generally is possible—they should be all ready to send and then should be mailed just after the ceremony has been performed.

LOVEJOY :: By BEATRICE BURTON

Lovejoy Wants to Rent New House Despite Tom's Disapproval

CHAPTER XXII.

TOM held out his hand for the telegram.

"I insist upon seeing that thing," he said.

But Lovejoy shook her head firmly. She simply couldn't show that wire to Tom! She couldn't let him know that she had been acting as go-between for Aline and the man in South Port. . . . She couldn't give Aline away.

It is a favorite saying of men that women do not know how to stand up for each other.

But that's not true. Women can have friendships as strong as the fine friendships that very often exist between men. And there is honor among women just as there is honor among men—and among thieves!

And not for a second did Lovejoy even dream of letting Tom know what Aline was doing outside the safe walls of her home.

"No, I'm sorry, Tom, but you can't see this telegram," she said. "You'll just have to trust me this once."

Tom's face had gone white under the lights in the room. His lips were pressed together in a straight narrow line, and his hands were clenched at his sides.

"Listen to me, Lovejoy," he said so quietly that Hilda, putting away her paper and ink in the kitchen, could not have heard him. "I don't know whether I trust you any more or not. You went out Saturday night the minute my back was turned and you've refused to tell me where. You went out again—Heaven knows where! And while you were gone you get this telegram that you refuse to show me. Something's all wrong somewhere."

Lovejoy nodded, her eyes suddenly blazing.

'Something Wrong!'

"Something is all wrong with you. That's what's wrong!" she snapped. "You run out two or three nights a week and leave me here alone to amuse myself. . . . Well, listen, I AM going to amuse myself and I'm going to do it in my own way. So just broadcast that to yourself, Tom Nicholson!"

Tom caught her by the wrist as she turned away from him.

"Whose fault is it that I've been going out with Al Alderson lately?—Who insisted upon being friends with them because they had money and might buy some bonds from me? Because they might know people who'd buy bonds from me? You did! I never wanted to know them. I never wanted to run with a lot of people who can buy and sell us ten times over—"

"Don't TALK to me!" Lovejoy interrupted him. She wrenched herself away from him. "Don't talk to me! . . . You're like all the rest of the men, blaming your own misdeeds on your wife! You don't have to run every time Al Alderson lifts his finger if you don't want to!—And don't think I don't know it! I'll bet everything that you and he were out with a couple of girls this very night!"

She did not believe what she was saying for even one second.

She knew that Tom was decent. She had always known that he was honest and loyal and good. Good all the way through . . . and she was going to keep him that way. She wasn't going to let him get away with a thing!

Aline came home on Friday, and Lovejoy took all of the South Port letters to her late that afternoon.

Gives Aline Letters

"There ought to be another one, Aline," she told her. "Mrs. Bennett says a special delivery came to her house last Saturday night and she sent the mail man over to my house with it. But Hilda says it didn't come there. It must have been taken back to the postoffice."

Aline nodded absently. She had opened one of the letters and she was reading it, lost to the world.

"I imagine it'll turn up," she murmured presently. "Anyway it will never fall into Al's hands, addressed to you. So I'm not going to worry about it."

Before Lovejoy left she went upstairs and brought down a present that she had brought for her. It was a white princess slip made of strips of lace and chiffon and caught here and there with tiny pearl flowers.

"I saw it in a shop and it looked like you, so I bought it," she said in her friendly sweet way. "Will you come over here for lunch tomorrow? I'm going to have some girls in to play cards."

* * *

By the first of May, Lovejoy was playing cards with Aline's crowd once or twice a week.

She had bought a wide black afternoon hat with the money that Tom had won at Al Alderson's first poker party. And she kept $5 out of her grocery allowance every week to pay her bridge debts. Aline and her crowd played for money always.

"I'll have to have the girls at my house pretty soon," she told Aline one afternoon early in May when they were driving home from a game at Jane Goodsell's flat on the North Side.

"But I'm not going to until we move," she added, and Aline shot her a puzzled glance.

"Yes, we're going to move into that house they've just finished building at the corner of our street and Tudor road." Lovejoy went on. "Tom doesn't know it yet. But I found out that it was for rent, and I've told the owner I'd take it for a year. It's a hundred and sixty a month, so Tom will just have to speed up and make some more money for the rent."

"Well, good for you, Lovejoy!" she cried. "I'm glad to hear you talk sense at last!—I've always told you that the only way to make a husband stir his stumps is to insist upon having a good house and plenty of clothes and things! Any man can make money if his wife just tells him he's got to do it!"

Tom Wants Garden

That night at dinner Lovejoy decided to break the news about the new house to Tom.

But while she was still wondering how to begin, he tossed a little colored catalogue across the table to her.

"I'm going to buy a new machine," he said.

Lovejoy's face brightened as if someone had lighted it from within with a hundred-candle-power lamp.

"Oh, Tom, a new car!" she exclaimed. "How marvelous! Now I can drive Aline to the bridge club once in a while!—We'll keep the old one, too, won't we?"

Tom was laughing at her. "I didn't say I was going to buy a new automobile," he said. "I said I was going to buy a new machine. I meant a mowing machine, honey."

She saw then that the little catalogue had a picture of a lawn-mower on its bright cover. She gave it a scornful little push with one pointed fingernail.

"Oh, Tom, how mean of you to try to fool me like that!" she said. "I thought you meant a new car, of course."

Tom reached for the catalogue.

"I bought a lot of grass seed today, too," he told her, "and a lot of plants to set out. I'm going to have a garden here this summer."

"Not here." Lovejoy's voice was hard and cold, and her eyes were like polished gray stones for a moment. "We're going to leave this beastly little hole on the first of June. . . . You're making a lot of money now, and it's time we had some furniture of our own and a decent house. I've just about promised Dunbar, the man who's building the house at the corner, that we'd take it—and I've been picking out furniture for it for two weeks."

Tom Disapproves

She picked up her glass of iced tea, and kept her eyes on it as she drank.

"But we can't afford to move at this time," Tom objected after a minute or two. "And anyway, the smart thing for us to do is to buy this house instead of renting another one. We could soon get this little place paid for and then we'd have something."

Lovejoy opened her lips to give him some sort of sharp answer.

Then suddenly she closed them again.

It came to her that she was going about this in the wrong way. It never did any good to club and drive a man like Tom into doing things that he didn't want to do. He could never be driven. But he could always be coaxed into submission.

She walked around the table to him and sat down on his knees with her soft powdered cheek against his cheek.

It was weeks since she had made love to him. Weeks of quarrels and misunderstandings and angry silences.

She put her arms around him now and kissed him with tenderness and passion. She meant all the tenderness and the passion, too, as she did it. . . . She really did love Tom, and it was wonderful to be in his arms again like this.

"All right, darling, if we can't afford the house we'll just have to stay here," she murmured into his ear.

But way underneath all her tenderness, she hadn't changed her mind at all. She still meant to have that house on the first of June!

'Public Improvements Promote Progress'

Convinced that public improvements exert an important influence upon the progress of any community, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County, on January 1, 1924, initiated a program of major public works, many of which are already effectively serving the citizens, while others of vital importance are being rapidly brought to completion.

During the year 1930 thirty-six miles of roads and boulevards, totaling in cost approximately $6,000,000, were completed or placed under construction. This represents the largest yearly road construction program undertaken by the County Commissioners. The list includes the Ohio River Boulevard, Saw Mill Run Boulevard, Moss Side Boulevard, and 21 other road projects widely distributed throughout the County. The most up-to-date road construction practices were followed in this work.

MAKES SURVEY OF NATURAL GAS

C. D. Halsey & Company Sees Great Future for Fast Growing Fuel Industry

A discussion of the leading producers and distributors of natural gas is given in a booklet entitled "A Study of the Natural Gas Industry" recently issued by C. D. Halsey & Co., members of the New York and Pittsburgh Stock Exchanges.

The booklet which was prepared by L. C. Marshall of the statistical department in the company's main New York office at 43 Broad street, says in part:

"Realizing that natural gas is an efficient and highly desirable fuel for industrial and domestic use, leading producers and distributors are now taking important steps to open up the large gas reserves of the country in an effort to make it available to the more remote cities where the demand is constantly growing. Heretofore only those industries which were located near the wells and only those domestic consumers who were similarly situated could enjoy its many advantages, but by means of long distance pipe lines the movement to supply more distant communities is gaining rapidly.

EASILY HANDLED

"The increasing demand for natural gas for industrial purposes indicates its superiority as a heat producing fuel. Manufacturers have found that natural gas is more easily handled than coal or oil since no large storage space is required and because it is delivered to the plant as it is consumed, thereby eliminating the inconvenience of tying up capital in fuel inventories. Furthermore, natural gas leaves no residue to be disposed of, and the heat may be easily controlled. Approximately 80 per cent of the total natural gas consumption in 1928 was used by the industrial market, compared with 20 per cent for the domestic market. Industries which will continue to furnish an increasing outlet are cement, ceramic, steel, glass, smelting and refining.

"Although the domestic markets for natural gas have shown comparatively small increase in the course of the past 10 years, it is believed that this class of consumers will constitute a more important outlet in the near future. Producers and distributors are beginning to realize the vast possibilities of natural gas for home heating, cooking and refrigeration, and efforts are now being made to reach such important centers as Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore and New York City.

"Gas companies in these cities have been supplying the homes with manufactured or artificial gas which has a heat content of only 530 British thermal units and which retails at $1 to $1.25 per 1,000 cubic feet. Natural gas, on the other hand, has a heat content of 1,100 British thermal units, and while it is impossible to estimate the exact retail price owing to the expense of building long pipe lines, experts agree that natural gas may be delivered in these cities at the same or slightly lower prices. The advantage, of course, lies in the fact that natural gas has the higher heat content and therefore reduces to a proportionate extent the amount of gas required.

MIXED GAS

"Many local gas companies have already adopted the practice of mixing natural gas with artificial gas before retailing it to the consumer. This method enables the consumer to receive more heat per 1,000 cubic feet of gas burned, and in some cases has resulted in a lowering of the retail price. Purchases of natural gas by local companies for this purpose showed an increase of 50 per cent for the first eight months of this year over the corresponding period in 1928. In cities located near the large gas fields the local distributing companies have gradually increased the proportion of natural gas used and it is predicted that where possible natural gas will eventually supplant artificial gas entirely."

The important sources of natural gas, the feasibility of long-distance transmission pipe lines, super gas systems, leading pipe line companies, leading producers of natural gas, distributing companies and super gas systems already in operation are topics which are taken up.

In conclusion the study says:

EXPECTED GROWTH

"In the foregoing discussion we have endeavored to outline the natural gas industry as it is today. Looking into the future we believe that natural gas will find a more important place as a fuel for industrial and domestic consumption. Steps which have already been taken indicate the rapidity with which expansion plans are being consummated, and in the not distant future we see the possibility of piping natural gas from the Appalachian field to Philadelphia and New York City, from Louisiana and Texas to Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and St. Paul. To go one step farther, it is interesting to note that should the necessity ever arise, it is quite within the realm of possibility to join existing eastern systems with the large southern gas fields though for the next few years at least, this would hardly be necessary."

GLASS MARKET QUIET

The flat glass distributing trade has not started buying to any noticeable extent so far this year, according to the National Glass Budget. Stocks in the possession of the jobbers are below normal, and it is thought that these interests must soon replenish at least the popular sizes of glass in order to carry on their business. Manufacturers of window glass report new business as very dull. Production is below a general average for the first of February. An unofficial estimate places factory output at less than 550,000 boxes for January.

The manufacturers, as well as the distributors, are most anxious that there will be improvement in the market with the advent of early spring. If reports are dependable concerning construction work that is now under way in the various states in the Union, there should be a pick-up in demand for window glass, as a good percentage of building now under side walls practically all-glass, poses.

Firms engaged in handling foundation materials in a number of the states are already noticing an increase in requests for quotations. Localities that are still quiet have been affected to some extent by the prevailing severe winter weather.

STEEL JOBBER MOVES

McKee-Oliver, Inc., has moved to its new warehouse with offices at 1326 West Carson street. This change was made necessary by the extension of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad Company's terminal facilities. The relocating of the warehouse and offices permits needed expansion. The firm now has a larger warehouse and adjoining storage yards with railroad sidings into both.

It is the company's plan to carry larger stocks so that it may offer a much better service. With its trucks it can reach all railroads, street cars and boat freight stations within 10 minutes from the new location.

The firm ships from warehouse or mill steel bars, angles, beams, channels, galvanized sheets, cold finished steel, Cumberland ground shafting, blue annealed sheets, black sheets, plates, rails, concrete bars, tool steel, roofing and siding.

It is also in a position to keyseat shafting to requirements and also to cut material to size. It is the Pittsburgh district representative for Buckeye Rolling Mill Company, Franklin Steel Works, Cumberland Steel Company, Lukens Steel Company and Moltrup Steel Products Company.

Coal Supply for 29 Days on Hand Here

Total stocks on hand of anthracite and bituminous coal as of January 1, 1930, in industries in the United States and Canada amounted to 36,500,000 tons or 29 days' supply based on the consumption during December of 39,666,000 tons, according to a report prepared by the coal committee of the National Association of Purchasing Agents, Inc.

Suggests New Air Line To Eastern Points

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE development of a safer air route from Pittsburgh to Eastern points is recommended by officials of the Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation in the organization's annual report to stockholders. The abandonment of the old Bellefonte route which has been called the "graveyard of aviators" is urged in favor of a new route which covers a less dangerous terrain even though the distance will be somewhat increased.

The report charges that the present route has proved a deterrent to the development of aviation in the Pittsburgh district and it suggests that the inevitable development of air travel will eventually push the older lane of travel into the discard in spite of the fact that some money has been spent on its development.

In discussing the Bellefonte route the report says:

"In the early days of aviation, when there was only an occasional trip across Pennsylvania, the course was set direct from New York to Cleveland by Army flyers and the few other pilots who had occasion to make this trip. This was natural, in that these trips were spasmodic. It was as the crow flies. Little was generally known of the other terrain of Pennsylvania, other than that the Alleghanies extended southward throughout the state. The occasional trips were purely individualistic as contrasted with presently developing organized transport of mail, passengers and express.

Beaten Path Followed

"IN THOSE early days, there was no appreciation of air highways, as subsequent aviation development has conceived them. There being no other beaten path, the Postoffice Department naturally followed the leader and selected this Bellefonte route without any attempt to survey other possibilities.

"It later developed that the Postoffice Department determined to withdraw from airmail carriage and to turn the same over to commercial operators. Again, this was early in the development of aviation, and there was not sufficient realization of the real problems involved, and of the extreme hazards and limitations of dangerous terrain and of bad weather conditions. The Bellefonte route having once been established, and naturally some small improvements having been added, the commercial air mail contractor found it most practical to follow this beaten path.

"Gradually, one improvement after another was made by the Department of Commerce co-operating with the Postoffice Department until eventually, this cow path airway beway became an aerial boulevard across the northern section of Pennsylvania. By the beginning of 1929, so much time, effort and expense had beeen put into this Bellefonte route that despite its original illogical selection, little response could be obtained to any suggestion for making a change.

New Route

"JUST as many of our surface highways were developments of previous beaten paths, which in many instances followed the lines of least resistance, just so this Bellefonte route became the established airway across Pennsylvania. Also, just as it has proven necessary to revamp many of these surface roadways as a result of later engineering surveys, it, at least, seems very debatable as to whether or not this Bellefonte route may not be compelled to give way to, or at least share with, a more advantageously located airway running from New York to Philadelphia, to Harrisburg, to Cresson (just outside of Altoona), to Pittsburgh, to Cleveland.

"Pittsburgh would then become the only city located on the two most important transcontinental routes, one from New York to the West by way of Chicago, and the other by way of St. Louis. Geographical location should be of great importance to Pittsburgh in transcontinental airway development. It is believed that this more Southern Trans-Pennsylvania route would serve largely to remove from our state the stigma of being considered the graveyard of aviators."

Danger Reduced

A THOROUGH survey of Pennsylvania made during 1929 by the State Aeronautics Commission co-operating with the Departtment of Commerce, the Postoffice Department and other agencies showed that weather conditions on the new route are more satisfactory to fliers than the old route.

The Allegheny Mountains are crossed at their narrowest point. Only 60 miles of bad terrain are covered while the Bellefonte air line crosses the mountains at their widest spread of 160 miles of bad terrain.

On the Pittsburgh route the ridges are not broad and they have large intervening areas of cultivated land which could be used by a pilot in difficulties. On the other hand the Bellefonte route parallels mountain tops and covers thickly wooded lands.

While the Pittsburgh route is 39 miles longer it ties up with more important cities and has better connections with other transportation facilities. In particular the Harrisburg connection is valuable since it is a logical junction point with an air line to Washington.

Hog Prices Gained During Past Month

A further advance in hog prices featured the wholesale meat trade during January, according to a review of the live stock and meat situation issued today by the Institute of American Meat Packers.

Although the prices of smoked meats, most dry salt meats and lard advanced somewhat, fresh pork prices showed a declining tendency and current results on hog operations were unsatisfactory. Lard, notwithstanding the advance, is still wholesaling below the price of hogs.

The demand for beef was slow and prices declined, especially during the latter part of the month.

The export trade in pork and pork products was fairly good for the month as a whole.

STEEL OUTPUT TAKES SHARP UPTURN

Producers Find Difficulty In Accounting for Increased Demand

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel production has increased sharply in the past week, estimates of the rate running up to 75 per cent. This seems too high when the highest district rate reported is 80 per cent, for the Chicago district, but the general average cannot at the outside have been much under 70 per cent. There is, of course, no overproduction, there being a full supply of orders for the output.

Indeed, it appears on the contrary that some producers have not stepped up their production as much as their order books would justify, preferring to stretch out the deliveries a trifle, which would have a salutary influence on the market and would avoid the special expense of an extra and temporary increase in operations.

JANUARY GAIN

There is an increase of between one-fourth and one-third in the rate of production over the average in December, putting the rate fully equal to that of November, but still well below the October rate. The rate is not far from the January-February average of years prior to last year, but is well below the rate of one year ago.

In view of fully justifiable expectations of increasing steel requirements with the progress of the season and the advent of spring, and the getting under way of extensive construction programs, the present demand for steel as indicated by the rate of production is remarkably high. The expected increases added to the present tonnage would make a very satisfactory steel situation in a few months, plainly much better than was recently expected.

DEMAND MYSTIFIES

Difficulty is encountered in explaining where the increased steel demand comes from. Producers are unable to throw much light on this question, their orders being highly miscellaneous in character and being for relatively small lots at a time. Many of the individual finishing branches of the industry do not show high rates by any means. There are estimates that the strip mills have merely worked up to a rate of about 50 per cent. Pipe and wire mills are at about 40 per cent. Wire mills are at low rates as has been the case more or less for several years. Tin plate mills are averaging 70 to 75 per cent and sheet mills are hardly doing as well as that. Bar mill operations are not particularly heavy.

There is, however, a high rate at structural mills, while rail mills are at close to their maximum rate. Seasonal buying was done early and ran somewhat above the average while deliveries are being taken freely. The Chicag district rail mills are expected to reach their maximum rate within a month. Rail production usually beg'ns to fall off in June.

CAR ORDERS HIGH

Part of the increase in steel demand is of course merely a reaction from December when many customers were taking less steel than they were consuming, in order to reduce January 1 inventory to the lowest possible notch. The remainder of the increase seems to be in miscellaneous or general lines, which cannot be viewed individually. Specific lines are running much as they have been right along.

The agricultural implement industry is averaging close to 100 per cent operation, but it has been doing very well since the slight seasonal lull of last summer. Freight car shops reached a fairly high rate of operation last April, tapering off slightly in the late months of the year, while car buying in the last three months has been rather moderate, not sufficient to indicate an increase in operations. Class I railroads have in the neighborhood of 30,000 freight cars on order at the present time, against a peak of 43,486 cars on May 1, 1929. The present estimate includes an allowance for 2,300 cars just bought by the Milwaukee.

AUTO BUYING UP

As to the structural fabricating shops, their largest order book was last September, when they had an amount of work equal to about five months of operation at the time, a very heavy rate, though, of course some of the large jobs would string out over a longer period. Since then the order book has decreased slightly. Lettings have run lightly so far this year, except that the past week has made a good showing, with 53,000 tons or well above last year's weekly average.

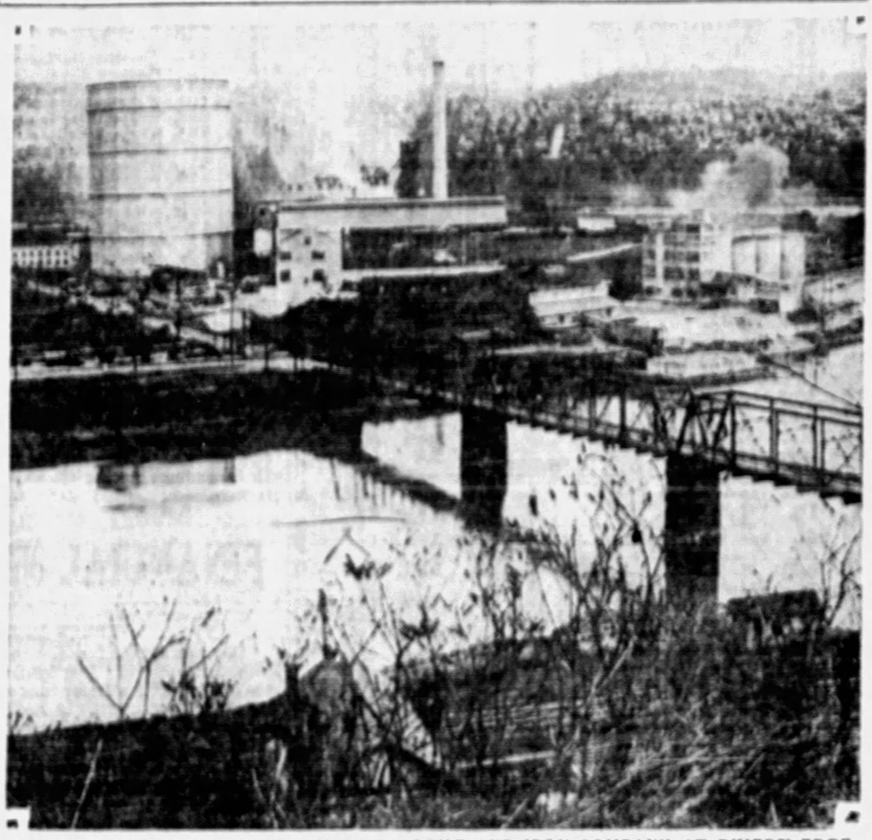
Automobile trade buying of steel has increased greatly in percentage but is still low in point of tonnage. The industry's announced policy is one of conservation in producing cars, and this is confirmed by the manner in which steel is bought, orders of considerable size being frequently telegraphed or telephoned.

PROFITS FAVORABLE

Earnings reports of steel companies for the year 1929 are of course very favorable, while fourth quarter reports have run better than might have been expected in view of the falling off in business, but as a matter of fact the official reports of steel ingot production showed the fourth quarter only 13 per cent under the average of the three preceding quarters. The Steel Corporation's shipments of steel products for sale may be estimated at about 15,250,000 tons, the largest on record except for slightly larger tonnages in 1916 and 1917. The indicated earnings per ton were the largest in the corporation's 28 years, except for 1916 and 1917.

The Steel Corporation's capacity has undergone very little increase since 1917, while independents have had a large increase as a whole. The Steel Corporation's heavy expenditures have been aimed chiefly at cost reduction, now shown in its increased earnings per ton when realized prices have been declining except for a slight increase last year.

PLANT MAKING SMOKELESS FUEL



NEVILLE ISLAND PLANT OF THE DAVISON COKE AND IRON COMPANY AT RIVERS' EDGE

DOMESTIC COKE SOLD

With the completion of the giant new plant of the Davison Coke and Iron Company at Neville Island, Pittsburgh now has a home industry that, in addition to pig iron and green bag cement, produces Neville Poco-mixed coke.

Thousands of tons of carefully selected, high-quality Pittsburgh and famous low-volatile Pocahontas coal, correctly proportioned and scientifically blended, is used daily to produce this coke.

This new coke is smokeless, odorless, high in carbon, slow burning, high fusing and low in ash. These qualities, according to satisfied users, make it an ideal domestic fuel.

SMOKE EVIL

The Bureau of Mines recently published information that 60 per cent of smoke and soot in residential sections of Pittsburgh comes from heating furnaces and suggsted the most economical way of eliminating this nuisance was by using a smokeless fuel that will burn well in equipment now in use.

Many tests in various types of furnaces show Neville Poco-mixed coke will burn well and give clean, uniform heat in any furnace. Three tons should last as long and give as much heat as five tons of good quality bituminous coal.

The plant's location on Neville Island, just outside of Pittsburgh, places this company in position to give unexcelled service by river, rail or truck, and makes it possible for dealers handling this new fuel to, at all times, have the proper size coke ready for immediate delivery.

Other companies are in the habit of marketing only that portion of coke in sizes too small for blast furnace use, while the Davison Coke and Iron Company will sell the size coke best suited to consumer's requirements. It is produced in nut size for small furnaces, stove size for large furnaces, and furnace size.

Those most vitally interested in Pittsburgh's welfare have pointed out how this great metropolitan district can be most economically made a better, cleaner place in which to work and live.

SUGGESTS COKE

The Bureau of Smoke Regulation in Pittsburgh, and many other large cities, has recommended coke in many instances as the cure for smoke and soot nuisance.

The Mellon Institute reports that smoke and soot, not including depreciation, costs Pittsburgh annually $20 per capita.

Pittsburgh's City Council for 1930 set side $5,460 to keep 10 smoke inspectors on duty from October 1 to April 1.

The foregoing facts clearly illustrate the importance of this new coke industry to Pittsburgh. Officials of the company at the time of starting the sale of coke emphasized the fact that this product is not regarded by them as a by-product. It is destined to become one of the organization's most important products.

The tonnage that is daily being marketed in Pittsburgh surpasses all expectations. It is Pittsburgh's smokeless fuel that can be had at no extrta cost. Many homes, apartments, churches and other institutions have turned to the use of Neville Poco-mixed coke with highly satisfactory results, thus creating a demand for a tonnage that is keeping this young industry operating to capacity and adding to Pittsburgh's prosperity by furnishing steady employment to a large number of workmen.

LUMBER FIRM ORGANIZED

Among the most recent additions to the lumber fraternity of this city is the Peerless Lumber Company organized by Archibald W. Loney and J. J. Schaming. This company will conduct a commission and wholesale office. Its relations with the retail lumber yards will be on a commission basis and with the industrial plants it will either buy the requirements from the mills outright or have them invoiced to the users direct on a profit-sharing basis.

Mr. Loney is a thoroughly experienced lumberman, having been connected with every branch of the industry and he has a very extensive acquaintance among the buyers of the eastern states. He is recognized as one of the most practical and successful lumber salesman in this territory.

Mr. Schaming has been a citizen of Pittsburgh for 35 years, having been engaged largely in the real estate business.

RAILROADS CUT EXPENSES

The savings to American business, as a result of the improved railway service since 1923, are the equivalent of a 30 per cent reduction in freight rates, according to the Railway Age.

This estimate is based upon answers to a questionnaire received from the officials of 100 large industrial and commercial concerns in the United States.

The executives place the greatest emphasis upon the reduction of inventories which the increased speed and dependability of freight service have made possible. While it is not possible to estimate accurately the amount of these inventories before the great improvement of freight service was begun in 1923, or the total reduction that has been made since that time, it is evident that the aggregate reduction has amounted to many billions of dollars.

The executives report inventory reductions ranging from a minimum of 15 per cent to a maximum of 75 per cent, with the average at about 40 per cent.

RETAIL TRADE CONTINUES QUIET

Industrial Operations Show Slight Gain; Food Prices Lower

The current week has not recorded any material improvement in the wholesale and retail trade, both of which continue quiet for this season of the year, according to R. G. Dun & Co. Retailers have been stimulating trade by extensive advertising and clearance sales, but changeable weather conditions have had some adverse effect upon business, and the total volume of sales has been somewhat below normal.

Jobbers report a fair volume of business for current requirements, but future orders, in most lines, are light. Construction work is comparatively quiet, and the movement of lumber and building materials generally is less active than a year ago. Groceries and provisions are in fair demand with prices averaging lower than for several years.

PLANT ACTIVITY GAINS

Industrial operations have shown some increase during the past week, operations of steel plants having risen to about 73 per cent, which compares with above 63 per cent a year ago, at this time. There is a slight improvement in the demand for window glass, but almost entirely for immediate requirements and buying is considerably below normal. While there is a moderate demand for plate glass, buying is not as active as a year ago.

Production of plate glass in 1929 was the highest on record, exceeding 150,000,000 square feet, this being approximately 20,000,000 square feet greater than the 1928 record. Demand for electrical equipment continues good and operations of plants in this district are at a very fair rate.

Producers of sanitary equipment report business rather quiet. There has been another moderate decrease in the production of crude oil.

COAL DEMAND UP

While the cold weather has stimulated the demand for bituminous coal for heating purposes, and industrial demand is also slightly better, the market continues rather quiet and prices unsatisfactory. Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted per net ton, at mines, as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 to 90 cents, and gas slack, $1 to $1.10.

Jobbers report collections still averaging rather slow.

Mexican Eagle Oil Output Is Lower

LONDON, Feb. 1. — Mexican Eagle Oil production for week ended January 25 was 253,000 barrels against 259,000 in previous week and 285,000 two weeks ago.

C. G. PHIFER

TO TEACH IN SCHOOL

Pittsburgh Academy announces a new course in salesmanship to be given by C. G. Phifer, department store representative for L. S. Roberts, sales agent for the National Cash Register Company.

This course will consist of 16 classes held weekly on Tuesday evening at 6:15, beginning February 11. Each class will be one and one-half hours in duration.

Mr. Phifer is very well qualified to conduct such a course. His knowledge of salesmanship and sales methods have aided materially in obtaining for him the position he now holds.

During his eight years with the organization he now represents, Mr. Phifer has been an office man, accounting machine salesman, special man, office manager, supervisor of the accounting machine division, and for the past three years department store representative. In these various capacities he has had considerable experience in applying his company's training program to the local organization, as well as an opportunity to enhance his personal sales experience.

The course will consider the fundamentals of salesmanship, and pay special attention to the details as they apply to the sale.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Irregular — Local Market Active

STOCKS MIXED, ADVANCES IN MAJORITY

Westinghouse Opens at Lower Level as Does Steel; Sears, Roebuck Starts Up

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—The stock market opened irregular today, with gains predominating, although most of them were of a fractional character. Union Carbide and Sears Roebuck advanced nearly a point, but Westinghouse Electric dropped 2 points. Packard Motors opened with a block of 10,000 shares at 16⅛, off ⅜, and U. S. Steel common opened ⅛ lower at 184½.

Resumption of bullish operations in the public utility issues was offset by heavy week-end profit taking in some other sections of the list, giving the market the appearance of irregularity. Trading was fairly heavy in volume.

Western Union assumed the leadership of the public utility group with an early gain of 5 points. American Power and Light and Standard Gas & Electric each advanced 2 points and Detroit Edison 1¾. Public Service of New Jersey was one of the few soft spots in that group, falling back 1¼ points in the first half hour.

Columbian Carbon was again in brisk demand, quickly rising 3 points. Interstate Department Stores and Safeway Stores were brought forward as new leaders in the merchandising group.

Gillette Safety Razor and J. I. Case each sagged 2 points, and Chesapeake and Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation and Hudson and Manhattan lost a point or more. U. S. Steel common met heavy offerings from the start, saging more than a point from yesterday's closing level.

Foreign exchanges opened steady, with sterling cables quoted a shade lower at $4.86 15-32.

MULLINS NET LOWER

CLEVELAND, Feb. 1.—Preliminary figures of Mullins Manufacturing Company indicate for the year ended December 31, last, net profit of around $475,000 after all charges, equivalent after allowing for dividends on the 7 per cent preferred stock outstanding to better than $2.60 a share on 100,000 no-par common shares. This would compare with net profit in 1928 of $728,531, the equivalent of $6.52 a share after dividends on the 8 per cent preferred outstanding at that time.

Mullins operations were affected during the final three months of the year by the curtailment of activity in the automobile business. Net profit for the first nine months was $474,748, or practically the same as is likely for full year.

In the latter part of 1928, through issuance of $3,000,000 7 per cent preferred stock, the old issue of $900,000 6 per cent preferred was retired. With the balance the company retired about the same amount of notes and spent more than $1,000,000 in improvements. Capacity was increased through construction of another plant and the old plants improved with a resultant decrease in operating costs.

Outlook for 1930 is dependent primarily on developments in the automobile industry. Company has a satisfactory backlog of bookings that any upturn in automobile production will release.

Illinois Bell Wins Chicago Rate Case

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—Illinois Bell Telephone Company was granted a permanent injunction in the Federal Court against the city of Chicago in the rate reduction case which has been in litigation for several years, preventing the Illinois Commerce Commission from forcing a rate reduction ordered in 1922, which, if the court had ruled to the contrary, would have required the telephone company to refund more than $11,000,000 with accrued interest.

U. S. Iron and Steel Exports Up 5.8%

Iron and steel exports in 1929 are estimated at 3,032,352 gross tons, an increase of 5.8 per cent over 1928 and the largest of any year since 1920. Imports for the year are placed at 738,919 tons, a drop of 8.9 per cent from 1928, and the lowest figure since 1924. Value of exports reached $200,428,084, an increase of $20,547,872 over 1928.

Phelps Dodge Corp. Cuts Copper Output

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Phelps Dodge Corporation announces a 40 per cent reduction in copper production to begin February 9 at its Morenci smelter. The cut will be effected partly by establishment of a five-day week. The Morenci smelter has been producing 51,000,000 pounds of copper a month.

Farm Price Level Down in Month

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1.—The general level of farm prices declined one point in the month ended January 15, 1930, according to the Department of Agriculture. The index at 134 is one point higher than a year ago.

Old Dry Goods Firm Closes Doors

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 1.—Termination of the business of the oldest dry goods house in Minnesota, Field, Schlick & Co., was announced with the retirement of two of St. Paul's oldest merchants, John I. H. Field and Frank Schlick.

Proposed construction of a new building which will take away one-third of the store's space and the advanced age of the two principal partners, were given as reasons.

HOLIDAY TRADE GAINED

The claims of those who said that business in Pittsburgh during the holidays would not slump are justified by figures just released by the statistician of the Chamber of Commerce, who states that in December, as compared with December, 1928, retail sales increased 2.6 per cent. Basing his statements on reports of the Federal Reserve Bank, the statistician announces that for the entire year of 1929 retail sales in reporting stores showed an increase of 2.6 per cent.

Only one other city in the mid-western section of the country showed an increase in December, that being Columbus, with an increase of 0.5 per cent. In this section decreases ran as low as 8.8 per cent for the month.

In the report mentioned, 48 towns throughout the country are listed, and only 12 of these had increases in December, as compared with the same month of the previous year, although 30 showed increases for the entire year.

In the immediate Pittsburgh section the greatest increase of any individual line of merchandise was in corsets, sales being 19.4 per cent greater than the previous December. Other increases were misses dresses, 14.3 per cent; cotton wash goods, 2.9 per cent; women's gloves, 0.3 per cent; knit underwear, 2.7 per cent; women's shoes, 5.5 per cent; children's shoes, 3.7 per cent; women's dresses, 5.4 per cent; girls' wear, 2.9 per cent; men's and boys' shoes, 8.5 per cent; draperies and upholsteries, 0.2 per cent.

Chain stores throughout this section increased noticeably in 1929, there being 698 more groceries, 372 more 5-and10-cent stores and 247 more drug stores.

Regular charge sales in Pittsburgh in December totaled 62.4 per cent of total sales, as against 55.6 per cent throughout the district. Installment sales in Pittsburgh amounted to 4.5 per cent of total sales, while in the district the percentage was 4.1 per cent.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Forbes

Morgan Shyest Man in America, Says Partner

—By B. C. FORBES—

THE week has brought further moderate improvement in the stock market and in industry and employment. Stocks have advanced every day this week, with but one exception. Trading still is rather lifeless. But it has been found easier to send good stocks up than to send them down. Bears haven't found it easy to run to cover.

This gradual improvement in stocks is gratifying because, say what you will, the influence exercised throughout the whole county by the stock market cannot be ignored.

The bond market is still rather moribund. Many investors reason that investment stocks are today relatively cheaper than investment bonds. There isn't so very much room for the latter to increase in price, whereas there is no telling how far skilfully-selected shares may by and by rise above their current low levels.

C. O. Miniger, president of the Electric Auto-Lite Company, has built up that enterprise so efficiently that even the biggest motor manufacturers can't match his costs—not even Henry Ford. Miniger estimates that outo and truck production this year will be much greater than now generally imagined. His prediction is for fully 5,000,000 units. And his company figures on equipping this year upwards of 2,500,000. He tells me that the company's list of stockholders has practically doubled in the last year. The shares lately have just had a 15-point rise.

Miniger, it is understood, now has an important interest in Willys-Overland.

President R. H. Ballard, of Southern California Edison writes me:

"We are all set for a prosperous year again out here, and, while the rain and snow were late in starting, we are now normal."

ONE of J. P. Morgan's partners tells me that Morgan is the shyest man in America. Newspaper reporters and photographers have often resented what they regarded as his snobbishness, aloofness, brusqueness and lack of consideration.

"Mr. Morgan's attitude towards reporters and photographers is caused by nothing but his shyness," declares this partner. "He particularly tries to dodge clicking cameras—he doesn't like to see his picture constantly in the newspapers."

The House of Morgan in recent years has had a more or less open door policy towards financial newspapermen. There was a time when the present head of the house didn't have a proper appreciation of the power of public opinion or of the advisability of giving information. Slowly, however, Morgan modified that attitude. Now there is no office in America more frequented by newspapermen than J. P. Morgan's, only J. P. usually delegates to Thomas W. Lamont the ordeal of being catechised by the press. Having early been a reporter himself, Lamont understands "the boys."

E. G. BIECHLER, president of Frigidaire, after a business tour over the continent, has returned confident that 1930 will prove quite a good year. His own company has planned a 15 per cent increase.

Talking of domestic refrigeration, I hear that a youngish man who has made many millions in the radio field is thinking of withdrawing from it with the idea of bringing out a refrigerating machine costing only $100.

It will be a great blessing to millions of families if manufacturers of refrigeration can bring down their prices very substantially.

There is no family in the land that would not like to have this unique convenience. But the price has been the barrier thus far to those on the lower rungs of the financial scale. At that, domestic refrigeration has proved one of the very fastest-growing of our infant industries.

ONE reader writes:

"You ask why there has been a decrease in railroad stockholders when there have been increases in stockholders in industrial and public utility corporations. Would you yourself keep your money in railroad shares, even the best of them, as a permanent investment, seeing that in five years nine-tenths of all first-class mail will be moved by airplane, and that the same competition will take nine-tenths of all passengers traveling 100 miles or more? The railroads will transport only the coarsest and heaviest of commodities. That's coming. We are not going backwards in the transportation of mail and passengers."

Surely, that is an exaggerated idea of what lies ahead. Won't there be room for all forms of transportation?

THIS is encouraging: General Electric's orders during the last three months of the year increased 23 per cent over 1928.

America is not going to the dogs.

World Oil Output Higher Last Year

World production of petroleum in 1929 is estimated at 1,478,400,000 barrels, an increase of 156,000,000 barrels over 1928 output. Of this total about two-thirds, or 1,006,681,000 barrels were produced in this country.

TRADE STRAWS SHOW PICKUP IN INDUSTRY

January, When Compared With December, Reveals Much Greater Activity

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—In this world of relativity, the month of January shone by comparison with December, when the recession in business reached a low ebb.

Of late, speculators and investors have been testing out the theory that the recovery in business will prove more than a flash in the pan. President Hoover's emphasis on the Department of Labor statistics indicating an upturn in employment, dramatized the data for the wider public. Although the final statistics for the month have not yet been formulated, there was confirming evidence of a regeneration of the spirit of venturesomeness in business, which had been stunned during the Wall street panic.

For example, a little known, but immensely significant barometer of the extent to which the wheels of industry have been turning is the consumption of babbitt, a compound of lead and zinc, which literally facilitates the turning of factory wheels.

BABBITT OUTPUT GROWS

In December, according to the Department of Commerce compilation, there was a 40 per cent decline in the use of babbitt, indicating a drastic shutdown. But in January according to information made available to me by E. J. Cornish president of the National Lead Company, the leading factory in making babbitt, the use of the compound rose substantially as compared with December.

Another straw in the wind is the fact that during January there has been no abnormal rise in the use of white lead, the chief ingredient in paint. In the past, there has invariably been an increase in the consumption of that material during the first phases of a major period of unemployment. The explanation apparently is that men, when first out of work and still protected by some savings, use their idle time to paint their homes. The failure of this increase to take place in January is a favorable straw, so far as the general economic outlook is concerned.

The Street nowadays is inordinately sensitive to technical guide-posts. The tone of the market in recent sessions has been set by the fact that average prices kept approaching the December 7 post-panic peak.

The theory of the chart readers is that nothing succeeds like success, which when translated into market terms means that if average prices go substantially through the December 7 peak, the performance foreshadows a favorable price outlook, and if they fail to do so, the inability would be construed as a bearish sign.

NO BEARING ON MERIT

Of course, this test is a purely speculative one and has no bearing on the intrinsic investment merit of stocks. Although the timing of purchases is always of extreme importance, my own view is that those who pick stocks from the investment or intrinsic merit viewpoint, with due regard to prospects of particular industries and companies, will do best this year.

The widespread search for bottom in the matter of business recession is the quest for a statistical abstraction, which won't become unmistakably discernable until after the event.

In forecasting trouble before the debacle, Mr. Cornish, of National Lead, expressed the belief that rising interest rates would check prosperity. He now believes that that deterrent is out of the way, and, in discussing the business outlook with me he said that he thought there was a good chance of an increase in the construction industry as a result of the availability of cheaper credit. He thought also that there would be a stimulus to public works, including road building. Seeing signs of a turn upward, Mr. Cornish prescribed "thrift and industry" as the remedy for the nation's economic maladies, which are already in process of correction.

Business Revives During Past Week

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Dramatized by the blow-in of several blast furnaces for the first time in months, business throughout the country is warming up from the bottom, and somewhat earlier or faster than was expected, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending February 1.

Steel production has expanded with surprising rapidity under the stimulus chiefly of automobile makers who think the market is good and are increasing schedules, preparing to try it out. Government reports are positive that employment has increased generally since the first of the year, which is not only gratifying but remarkable. Weakness in commodity prices, with the collapse of price begging plans, however in retarding buying activity and freight traffic and general trade are about as active as they were during the painful early weeks of 1928 when Model A was being born.

BUCS SET FOR COUGARS

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Georgia Tech Coming. To Meet Skibos Here. Panthers Shift Reserve.

PITT ABROAD IN MAJORITY OF GAMES

ONE more big football attraction from another part of the country, in addition to the famous stars of Notre Dame, has been booked for next season in Pittsburgh. No official announcement except the playing date has yet been made on the subject, but from other sources it is learned that when Clarence Overend, graduate manager of athletics at Carnegie Tech, issues the Plaid gridiron schedule for 1930 it will show a new home feature of exceptional color and appeal—nothing less than a battle here, betweeen the Tartans and Georgia Tech. The game is to be played at The Stadium on Saturday, October 11.

Clarence Overend.

That was the only date that the Southerners could consider for an appearance in Pittsburgh, and as Pitt had already contracted to meet Western Reserve here on October 11 it was necessary for Carnegie to ask the Panther officials to make a change in the Blue and Gold schedule. In order to open the way for the clinching of the big attraction for local fans, and to make a sportsmanlike return of a similar favor recently granted to the Panthers by the Skibos, the Pitt management graciously consented.

ACCORDINGLY, it is understood, arrangements have been made with Manager K. E. Davis, of Western Reserve, whereby the Pitt-Western Reserve game, instead of being staged here, will be transferred to Cleveland and played there on October 11. All of which means that for the first time in history, the Panthers will play more games abroad than at home next season.

For the game in Cleveland makes the fifth out of a total of nine to be played away from home by Dr. Sutherland's gridders. West Virginia is to be met in Morgantown, Syracuse in Syracuse, Nebraska in Lincoln and Ohio State in Columbus. The only home games will be those with Waynesburg, Notre Dame, Carnegie Tech and Penn State.

ALSO, for the first time, Pitt will be absent from the home field on three successive Saturdays. After the opener with Waynesburg on September 27, the Panthers will not be seen here again until they grapple with Notre Dame on October 25. In the meantime, West Virginia, Western Reserve and Syracuse will be encountered in a row abroad.

Though it was announced in December that Carnegie would play Georgia Tech on October 11 nothing was said at the time as to the scene of the contest. The fact that Pitt was to meet Western Reserve on that day, with no other dates open here, indicated that there would be no chance of the game's being brought to Pittsburgh. It was not until he obtained Pitt's consent to transfer the Western Reserve event to Cleveland that Manager Overend was able to cinch the big meeting with the Georgians for The Stadium.

W. A. Alexander.

THIS will be the fourth appearance of the Georgia School of Technology team in this city. The Southerners met Pitt at Forbes Field on November 23, 1918 and on October 25, 1919, while they were being coached by John W. Heisman, and again on October 23, 1920, when the coaching reins had been taken over by W. A. Alexander, who has been head coach ever since. In 1918 Pitt's schedule was cut to five contests on account of the influenza epidemic and the ban on public gatherings, but a game with Georgia Tech was played for the benefit of the War Work Campaign Fund. The Georgians, with their famous shift, were strong drawing cards and 25,000 persons witnessed the game, $25,000 being realized for the fund.

THE Panthers defeated the Golden Tornado in the first meeting, 32 to 0, Tom Davies making a run of 60 yards and another of 50 yards for touchdowns after receiving kicks, and three other touchdowns resulting from the clever work of the Davies-Easterday forward-passing combination. The late Walter Camp was among the spectators and selected Davies and Hilty, of Pitt, on his all-America team for that season.

In 1919, Pitt again downed the Georgians, 16 to 6, and in 1920 made it three victories in a row after a hard battle, 10 to 3. Those were the days of Guyon, Fincher, Flowers and Barron in Atlanta. Since that time Georgia Tech, under the able coaching of Alexander, has continued to stand out annually as one of the most colorful teams of the country. The Southerners had an off season in 1929 and lost five games to North Carolina, Tulane, Notre Dame, Vanderbilt and Alabama, but with a wealth of new talent coming up they promise to have in 1930 one of their best outfits in a long time.

BASEBALL lost one of its best known and most picturesque figures in the death of Pongo Joe Cantillon yesterday at Hickman, Ky. As a minor league player, starting in 1884, he served with the Green Bay, Dubuque, Rockford, Eau Claire, Terre Haute and Oakland clubs. Later he was an umpire, major and minor league manager, coach and finally supervisor of umpires in the American Association.

When the National and American leagues were at war in 1900, 1901 and 1902, and players were jumping from one circuit to the other, Cantillon was the only umpire to figure in such a shift. The National induced him to leave the American and work in the senior loop. He was considered the best umpire in the country at the time.

Walter Johnson.

AMONG the numerous men who played under the managership of Cantillon in the majors and minors were two who have been rated by many baseball men as the greatest right-hand and left-hand pitchers of all time—Walter Johnson and Rube Waddell. Cantillon was the first manager under whom Johnson pitched in the big show. Joe was manager of the Washington club when Walter came up in 1907, and continued to direct that team in 1908 and 1909, so that he must be said to have played a part in the development of that once great hurler. Cantillon bought Waddell for Minneapolis from the Browns late in 1910, used him in 1911 and 1912, shipped him to Virginia in the Northern League in 1913, and later took care of Rube for a time at his Hickman home before the eccentric pitcher entered a San Antonio (Tex.) sanitarium, where he died on April 1, 1914.

IT DEVELOPS that Manager Jewel Ens, of the Pirates, far from hesitating about taking on Max Carey as a coach, actually sought the services of the former outfield star. Ens announced early in December that unless he could get the man he wanted he would not sign an additional coach.

Jewel now admits that he had Carey in mind from the start, but could not induce Max to sign until the latter had given up all hope of getting a managerial job somewhere. "I have been after Carey for two months and am tickled to death at getting him," says the Pirate pilot. "I am sure he will be very valuable to us, particularly as a coach for the baserunners."

SYRACUSE, BISONS HOSTS TO LOCALS

By JESS CARVER

There are only four basketball games pinned on the college card for tonight which concerns we'uns of the tri-state district, but all four are what may be technically called "honey." Two of the four games bring Pittsburgh teams into action, but on foreign courts.

Vic Hansen

Pitt and the Dukes have both left town for contests tonight, the Panthers being in Syracuse for a meeting with Vic Hansen's unbeaten and highly-touted Orange, and the Dukes, defending their position at the head of the Tri-State Conference floor race, battling it out with Bethany. The evening looks like an extremely large one for both the Panthers and the Irish.

The other two contests on the night's program bring together Westminster and Thiel in a Conference tussle at Greenville and West Virginia and Washington and Lee in an intersectional affair at Huntington.

PITT PLAYS ORANGE

Pitt is opening a short, two-game invasion of the East by tangling with Syracuse, and will move on to New York for a battle there Monday with Fordham. Tonight's tussle brings the Panthers face to face with about the only team along the Atlantic credited with having a chance to check the mad rush of Dr. Carlson's team to its second undefeated season in three years.

Duquesne looks to be up against it right with Bethany. The Bisons, hard to set down any time or place, are doubly difficult to beat out on their own floor. Chick Davies was forced to send his team into an extra period to eke out a one-point margin here a week or so ago. Since then, Bethany has taken Westminster, with 10 points to spare.

A defeat for the Dukes tonight and a win for Westminster over Thiel and the locals will spend Sunday wondering what happened to the league lead they enjoyed for a week.

The University of Pittsburgh swimming team, defeated last night by N. Y. U., meets the Army natators at West Point this afternoon.

TECH NAMES MANAGERS

Chester C. Williamson, of St. Louis and Paul B. Kramer, of 5639 Beacon street, Pittsburgh, will serve as joint student managers of the Carnegie Tech football team for 1930. It has been decided by the Tartan athletic council. They succeed Robert M. Wright, of 5442 Baywood street, who will graduate next June.

Byron Treon, of Sunbury, Pa.; Richard Turner, of New York, and Paul Ziegler, of Chagrin Falls, O., were elected first assistant football managers. Gustave Schwartz, of Tarentum, will serve as Plebe manager.

The council confirmed the election of Jess T. Price, of Pittsburgh, as captain of the varsity cross-country team for 1930. It also named Raymond F. Broscious, of Pittsburgh, manager of the cross-country, and Leon M. Worley, of Pittsburgh, manager of the freshman cross-country team. William Gesling, of Lancaster, O., and F. R. Millhiser, of Dormont, were appointed first assistant managers of varsity cross-country.

MONDAY—"A LIVELY SEPTUAGENARIAN."

DETROIT SIX TOUGH FOE TONIGHT

By CARL W. SHATTO.

"Program! Program! Here y'are! All of the players are numbered! Get a program and know who's who!"

This seldom-varied chant of the hockey program vendors at Duquesne Garden, often little heeded in the past, probably will not fall upon deaf ears tonight.

"Program! Program! Here y'are!"

For two reasons, the answering echo probably will be "gimme one."

Reason No. 1 for the boom in the program business is that the Pirate icemen haven't played at home for so long that local fandom well may experience some difficulty in remembering who's who on the Pittsburgh Club.

Reason No. 2 is that Manager Frank Frederickson is experimenting in a big way in an effort to find a winning combination, making it impossible to identify a performer by the position in which he appears.

COUGARS STRONG FOE

The Detroit Cougars, who accepted a 3-1 defeat on the occasion of their last appearance here, are to help the Bucs celebrate their "homecoming" at the Garden tonight. Because the Cougars are determined to overtake the Chicago Hawks and get into the Stanley Cup play-offs, the Pirates may experience some difficulty in persuading them to enter into the spirit of the occasion.

A 3-2 beating which the Detroiters absorbed at the hands of the Americans in New York Thursday night marked their first setback in four starts, and was an unfortunate circumstance for the locals in that it only served to whet the invaders' appetites for victory here.

Pirate lineup shifts, discarded after being given one trial here about a month ago and then tried again last week when the Bucs were on the road, will find Hib Milks at defense and Gordon Fraser at center in the starting front line. Frederickson is convinced that Milks can be used to the best advantage at defense, and has announced that Hib will be kept in the backfield throughout the remainder of the season.

FRASER AT CENTER

Although Fraser cannot match Milks in the matter of advancing the puck, Freddie plans to keep him at center because of his habit of feeding Harold Darragh or Jerry Lowrey the disc when either of his front line mates is in scoring position.

Johnny MacKinnon is to team with Milks in the backfield, and Ren Manners, up-and-coming young center recently recalled from the London (Ontario) Club, of the International League, will help Herb Drury do relief work at the pivot position. Jarvis and White, as usual, will be at the wings on the spare line.

Rough and ready Roger Smith probably will be the only defense spare whom Frederickson will have available for service tonight. Jess Spring suffered a broken artery in his right leg in Ottawa recently.

A Detroiter who will command considerable attention is Stan McCabe, star wingman recently obtained from the Detroit Olympics, who will be making his first appearance before Pittsburgh fans.

Approximately 100 Postal Telegraph messenger boys are to attend the game in a body. They have arranged a "surprise" for Manager Frederickson and have been awarded a "spot" on the program. The probable lineup:

Pirates.		Cougars.
Miller	G	Beveridge
MacKinnon	D	Wells
Milks	D	Rowbotham
Fraser	C	Goodfellow
Darragh	C	Conacher
Lowrey	W	McCabe
Spring—Pirates—Jarvis, White, Jarvis, Barton, Manners, Smith, Cougars—Hughes, Connors, Lewis, Aurie, Hicks, Herberts, Ray.

JOE HARRIS TO GO SOUTH WITH TORONTO

By JOHN P. COWAN, Staff Correspondent.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 1.—Joe Harris, famous first-sacker, who was benched by the surgeons and medical men last September, received good news at his home here in Franklin today. Down from the snowdrifts next week comes Steve O'Neil, manager of the Toronto club of the International League, and after a little conference here in Venango, it is likely that Joe will start at once for Tarpon Springs, Fla., to be on hand when the Canadians arrive there early next month for spring training.

Joe and Mrs. Joe join in saying this is good news, because it indicates that the word has gone abroad that he has about entirely recovered from the trouble that sent him to the Oil City Hospital for six weeks for an operation that kept him still longer in his apartment here.

"I am glad that there was a change of venue in that coal and iron trial," said Joe, because it brought a townful of Pittsburgh baseball fans to Franklin and they are all my friends. It seems they remember every play in which I took part at Forbes Field when I was with the Pirates and the other National League clubs. I didn't know Sam Gardner and Roy Clunk, but it seems they had rooted for me and it makes a fellow feel good to have them tell me now in the off-season. Frank Ritz, my old friend, brought in a busload of rooters and I held a reception for them. Pittsburgh is a loyal baseball town and any player who lands with the Pirates is lucky in winning lifelong friends."

CARNERA STOPS RIOUX IN 47 SECONDS

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—P. T. Barnum was right.

Primo Carnera proved it when he engaged in a alleged fist-fight with Elzear Rioux, of Canada, at the Chicago Stadium, last night.

The bout lasted exactly 47 seconds and 17,349 spectators, most of them sane, paid $59,625.28, to see Rioux fold up like a suit-case no less than six times, four times without being hit and finally roll over and play dead for a full count of 10.

Rioux did not land a punch during the brief proceedings. In fact, he never started one. As soon as Carnera lunged out of his corner, Rioux started to get into communication with the canvas. Primo fanned the empty breeze with a right hand and Rioux bobbed under it and down on the floor. He was up before the timekeeper could start a count, but went down again when Carnera heaved another punch into the empty atmosphere.

He was up and down four times before he finally decided to take a count. He took nine when the Venetian great hit him on the shoulder. When he got up, Primo rushed at him, and, when their shoulders collided, he went down again and stayed there until Referee Dave Barry counted him out.

After the bout was over, Commissioner Fred Gardner announced the purses of both men had been held up pending an investigation. Chairman John V. Clinnin did not attend the show, but the other commissioner, George P. Getz did, and following a conference between Gardner and Getz they decided to hold up the money.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Helene Madison, 16-year-old swimmer of the Crystal Athletic Club, Seattle, Wash., established a new world mark for women of two minutes, 29 seconds in the 220-yard free style swim in an A. A. U. meet in the Los Angeles Athletic Club pool last night.

Double Knockout, Double Foul, or— Double Cross???

One of the most unusual fights in the annals of championship boxing engagements was the battle between Ad Wolgast, defending the lightweight title, and Joe Rivers, the Mexican challenger, staged at Vernon, Cal., July 4, 1912.

Ad Wolgast

Both went to the floor in the thirteenth round.

Each claimed a foul.

Referee Jack Welch helped Wolgast to regain his feet and counted out Rivers.

Rivers claimed the bell had rung at the count of eight, but the result went down into the records as a knockout victory for Wolgast.

That changed decision was given in connection with a bout in which Pittsburgh's closest approach to a heavyweight champion, the late Dominick McCaffrey, met the most famous fighter of all time, John L. Sullivan.

McCAFFREY and Sullivan clashed with one-ounce gloves at Chester Park race track, Cincinnati, before a crowd of 35,000, on August 29, 1885. McCaffrey always claimed afterward that the agreement had called for the principals to go six rounds, and, if both were on their feet at the expiration of that period, to continue until one of them failed to come to the center. After completing six stanzas, the men fought a seventh round. According to McCaffrey's side of the story, the Pittsburgher was ready and eager to continue, but Sullivan refused to come up for the eighth round, whereupon the referee, William Tate, of Toledo, O., called the bout a draw. Three days later Tate changed his mind and gave the decision to Sullivan. All sorts of charges were made as to what had influenced Tate to alter his verdict, but the new decision stood and the bout appears in the record books as having been won by Sullivan. As it was a winner-take-all affair, the changed decision prevented McCaffrey from receiving any part of the purse.

JUST as fight fans had expected, Primo Carnera's second American ring appearance in Chicago last night turned out to be only another step in the circus campaign to rake in a lot of Uncle Sam's dollars and to continue the campaign of trying to make the vast Venetian look like a real fighter. Elzear Rioux was only another hand-picked set-up, and Carnera's "feat" of stopping him in the first round doesn't tell any more about Primo's fistic ability, if he has any, than did his equally quick win over Big Boy Peterson. The giant's managers are still making the going soft for Carnera and will continue to do so as long as the money comes in and boxing commissions permit them to select pushovers for him instead of requiring them to send him into a reasonable test against a fairly good fighter.

Another of last night's bouts that resulted in line with general anticipations was that in which Al Singer won the decision over Stanislaus Loayza in New York. Singer had looked to have a wide edge in all-around class in his favor and it would have been a great surprise if he had failed to come through. Loayza still is a tough bird, as is shown by the fact that he stayed the limit with Singer, but he has lost some of the steam he had three or four years ago, and even at his best he wasn't as good as the Singer of today. Jack Berg is the only hurdle that stands between Singer and a match with Sammy Mandell for the lightweight title.

Freeman's superior ring generalship, his greater experience and his smartness combined to give him a wide margin over the tough and willing lad from the Windy City.

Joe Coffman, Buffalo welterweight, registered a technical knockout over Jackie Hammer, Cleveland, in the fifth round of the scheduled six-round semi-final, while in another six-rounder Johnny Willis, Erie Negro, punched his way to a clean-cut decision over Tony Brown, of Jamestown, N. Y.

Red Jaderberg, Jamestown middleweight, registered a technical knockout over Paddy Ryan, Erie, in the fourth round, while in the scheduled four-round opener, Johnny Zack, Erie, making his first appearance in the professional ring, knocked out Merle Rogers, of Jamestown, N. Y., in the first round.

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Al Singer, the Bronx beauty, punched a few more holes in Stanislaus Loayza, tough old war horse of the lightweight division, in a sensational 10-round free-for-all battle that drew 18,000 to Madison Square Garden last night.

HUDKINS STOPS FLYNN

BOSTON, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska wildcat, battered Arthur Flynn, of Lawrence, to the canvas for the full count here last night in the third round of the Boston Garden's feature contest. Hudkins weighed 465; Flynn 169.

Waner Discharged From Hospital

Well on his way to recovery following an operation for appendicitis, Lloyd Waner, star centerfielder of the Pirates, was discharged from the Presbyterian Hospital yesterday afternoon. The athlete underwent the surgical treatment about 10 days previous to his departure.

Lloyd went to the home of his father-in-law, Mrs. Lydia Snyder, Oakland avenue, to recuperate. He expects to be present at the sports dinner scheduled for next Thursday night in the William Penn Hotel.

INDIAN WEST KNOCKS OUT MARTIN

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

A small crowd went home early from the Moose Temple last night as three knockouts cut the boxing bill short. Two substitutions of an opponent for Tiger Indian West, of Donora, Indian middleweight, in the main bout ruined the show from a drawing standpoint, and it was generally bad on its own account.

West won by a technical knockout over Nick Martin, of Cleveland, subbing for Young Saylor, of Charleroi, who originally was subbed for Young Guido, of Sharon, at the end of the sixth round of the scheduled 10-round windup when Referee Al Grayber called a halt. Martin, who had been saved by the bell at the count of four in the sixth frame after having been sent down by a hard right under the heart, insisted on continuing and the crowd was all for it, but the referee rightly stuck to his guns for Martin was badly hurt and probably would have been forced to quit in the next round anyway.

MARTIN OUTCLASSED

Martin, a slow-moving, heavy-set fighter, was little more than a catcher for the Indian's punches, most of which went home like knife thrusts. Rights to the jaw felled Nick for counts of nine in the first round, five in the third and eight in the fourth and he was in the midst of a rally when West flashed home the right under the heart that proved the finishing blow just before the end of the sixth round.

Martin's gameness and toughness alone permitted the bout to proceed as long as it did. West entered the ring with a patch over his left eyebrow covering a cut received in a bout with Henry Firpo at New Castle last Monday night, and he claimed after the bout that he had injured his left hand in the second round, which accounted for his constant leading with the right thereafter. He weighed 162½ pounds against 164 for Martin.

DELUCA "BEATS" ROBERTS

Cowboy DeLuca, of Lawrenceville, 146¾ pounds, received the unanimous decision of the judges and the referee over Hans Roberts, German, of Brookline, 144, in the six-round semi-final, but he didn't deserve it. Hans, a former local sensation, with victories over Dominick Profio, Joe Walcott and Young Rudy, was far off form and in the bargain early had the skin on his nose split and his right eye almost closed, yet he did all of the forcing throughout and in the last round had DeLuca badly tired and hanging on.

In Roberts' poor form, DeLuca should have been able to win decisively, possibly by a knockout, if he had extended himself, but he took advantage of his height and reach and loafed almost all of the way trying to fight a counter battle and forgetting to let his punches go as the German tore in and battered him about the body. If posing wins fights, DeLuca won this one a mile off, but on effort and scoring it was the German's beyond dispute.

NOVAK STOPS GROSS

Frank Novak, North Side heavyweight, former amateur champion, scored his second consecutive knockout as a professional when the referee halted his scheduled six-round battle with Carl Gross, formerly of West Virginia, now a rowing machine demonstrator in a downtown store, in the fourth round to save Gross from further punishment. Gross was game and put up a good fight against the hard-hitting Novak, considering that he was substituting on short notice for Ray Braun, of the North Side, who failed to show up to weigh in. Novak scored knockdowns for counts of nine in the first round, two of eight each in the second and three of no count, one and eight in the third and Gross was down twice in the fourth before the referee intervened. Novak weighed 189½ pounds and Gross 186.

Frankie Ellis, of Charleroi, 118½, quit to Jimmy Thomas, Negro, of the Hill, 117¼, in the first round of the opener, taking counts of two, nine, nine and going down again before the referee stopped it. Ellis, a newcomer, shaped up well for about a half-minute, but folded up as soon as he was hit.

The two frank and earnest judges, Frank Brown and Frank Ferris, the latter only yesterday elevated to the position of lieutenant of detectives in the homicide squad, worked the bouts, with Al Grayber in the role of referee. Chappie Couch was the timer and Bill Schuster the announcer.

Between Rounds

Two substitutions have been made in the preliminary card for the Sergt. Sammy Baker-Joe Trippe return bout at Motor Square Garden Monday night. Ken Hargreaves, of New Kensington, will take the place of Young Guzy in the eight-round semi-final and Sammy Goldstein, of the Hill, will bat for George Breisch, of the North Side, against Tommy Ward, of the South Side. Others has an attack of grippe and has gone to his home in Donora to recuperate, while Breisch injured a couple of ribs in training.

Trippe and Baker are due in town today for their windup battle. They likely will play to a capacity crowd, as a result of their pleasing party in their first clash, in which Baker had to put on a hot rally to come from behind and grab the decision. The Garden reports, however, that, despite the brisk advance sale and numerous reservations, a goodly number of tickets will be available for late comers.

Stanley Williams, of Wheeling, hears Babe Ruth, of Louisville, at Circleville tonight.

CRAWLEY AFTER HERRERA

Tommy Crawley, of the South Side, who left last night to place himself under the management of a New York pilot, hopes to return to Pittsburgh in a very short time worthy of a third battle with Tony Herrera, who recently knocked him out in the first round at Motor Square Garden, after Tommy previously had lasted 10 rounds with him in the Majestic Bowl. "I know I can beat Tony," Tommy said, "and it is my ambition to prove it."

Johnny Windsor is back in town and plans to remain here. He now scales 147 pounds and is ready to take on anybody in his class.

The Jolly Band, of New Castle, plans to stage an all-star show of short bouts for the benefit of the family of the late Joe Cimino, who managed Emmett Rocco. February 24 has been set as the date.

Ray Alvis, having resigned as matchmaker for Jack Dempsey's Commons club in Chicago, now is associated with Jack Hurley in the handling of a string of boxers which includes Tony Herrera, Young Jack Thompson, Billy Petrolle, Speedy Myers, Meyer Grace, Morris Sherman, Peter Zivic and others. Herrera boxes Eric (Kid) Wagner at Indianapolis next Tuesday.

James (Red) Mason, dean of local boxing managers, announced last night that he has purchased a one-half interest in Jackie Rogers and all of the other boxers in Johnny Deutsch's stable.

Mason has changed the name of his new welterweight, Louis Bonello, to Al Capone, because the moniker is too hard to say. The new name is tougher in connection.

Indian Tiger West has been signed by his manager, Al Reefner, to box Harry Fuller a return bout of six rounds on the Jimmy Slattery-Leo Rosica light-heavyweight championship card at Buffalo, February 10.

Lazzeri Joins Ranks of Yank Holdouts

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—(INS).—Tony Lazzeri, hard-hitting infielder, has joined the long list of New York Yankee holdouts. Lazzeri is not satisfied with a salary of $15,000 for 1930 and has returned his contract, unsigned.

In three weeks the first detachment of the Yanks are due to head for St. Petersburg, Fla., and the entire staff of regulars, with the exception of First Baseman Lou Gehrig, are dickering for more money than the club wants to pay them.

Babe Ruth's case overshadows the others, the home-run king demanding $85,000 a season and a three-year contract. Waite Hoyt, pitcher, is balking at the intention of the club of cutting his $17,500 salary. Leo Durocher, infielder, is asking a raise.

The Fintex team of the Allegheny County League will attempt to score its second victory of the week tonight when it invades Charleroi to meet the Lions in one of the two league games on the schedule. In the other battle the Homestead Ackermans will make an effort to get back in the running for the second-half title by engaging the Allentown Club on the Homestead Elks floor.

Fintex made an impressive start in the opening game of the second round by overcoming a 10-point deficit to defeat the Goldensons. If it shows the same fight tonight it should have no trouble scoring its second victory. Another triumph will enable the Fintex passers to take sole possession of first place.

Last night's County League game saw the Allentown Club trip the Charleroi Lions, 38 to 26. I. K. S. nosed out Equitable Life, 28 to 25, in the Central League, and the Penn Five beat the Kingsley House, 21 to 16, in the West Penn circuit.

Three games in the Metropolitan League found the Penn Cadets beating the Boys' Club, 35 to 33; I. K. S. Res. tripping Immaculate, 33 to 27, and Mt. Washington whipping St. Ann's, 48 to 34. Real Estate knocked off Westinghouse, 42 to 33, in the C. A. L.

The W. U. Hoyles won over the Wheeling McClaskeys, 40 to 33, and Latrobe Liberty Dairy barely nosed out the Trinity Cathedral Royals, 27 to 25, in two inter-city contests. The lineups:

NICK MARTIN INDIAN TIGER WEST

A right under the heart dropped Nick Martin, of Cleveland, just before the end of the sixth round of his main bout with Tiger Indian West at the Moose Temple last night and he rolled about on the canvas after the bell had saved him at the count of four. The blow injured him so badly in the judgment of Referee Al Grayber that the latter would not permit him to come up for the seventh round, awarding the bout to West on a technical knockout. Photo shows Martin on the floor near his own corner as the round ended.

IOWA FORGIVEN

BAN EXPECTED TO BE LIFTED TODAY

CHICAGO, Feb. 1.—(AP.)—Apparently forgiven for its athletic sins for which it was cast out of the Western Conference last May, the University of Iowa today expected to again be a member in good standing by nightfall.

The action necessary to restore Iowa to its former place in the organization, and to again make the latter the Big Ten, was set for today by the faculty committee on athletics of the Conference.

The sentiment of the members of the committee apparently was that Iowa, by declaring 29 athletes ineligible and otherwise polishing up its athletic department, had lived down the charges of subsidizing and proselyting of its stars, and was ready for readmittance.

The fact that the North Central Association of Colleges, of which Iowa is a member, had planned an investigation of its own into Iowa's athletic conduct also was a factor. The Conference schools appeared to feel that the Hawkeye institution should be spared the additional humiliation of having an outside group delve into its affairs.

President Harry M. Gage, of Coe College, Iowa, chairman of the North Central Association athletic committee, last night said that the proposed investigation at Iowa City would not be likely if the Conference committee voted to invite Iowa to return.

Members of the Conference committee had little to say concerning the meeting today, but it was known that Prof. Thomas E. French, of Ohio State University, chairman of the Conference eligibility committee, had prepared his report and had sent it to Prof. William Marshall, of Purdue, secretary of the faculty committee. The meeting today was to be a secret affair.

DOUGLAS MEETS UNION SWITCH

By TOM BIRKS

Fans locally have little to rave over this afternoon in the nature of real soccer. Only one game is scheduled and that will find Clan Douglas and Union Switch and Signal meeting in an exhibition game at the Swissvale grounds.

The writer is really opposed to the ordinary friendly game, but the natural spirit of rivalry between the Douglas and Switch aggregations puts the battle on a par with the usual cup-tie affair.

The teams met in the District League and battled to a tie, each side putting the ball into the net once. The game will be called at 3 p. m.

At this writing, the Holley of Detroit-Pierpoint Motor National open challenge cup game tomorrow is on, but when this evening rolls around, it is possible the usual collect telegram from National headquarters will be on hand stating that the game is off.

PITT AND DUKES IN HARD TILTS

bridge Thursday night as he made the principal address at the first annual banquet of the Boosters' Association, tendered the high school football team.

Waddell is a fine talker, and he puts his ideas across because he is so earnest. Bob means every word he says; his sincerity is contagious, and before he is half way through you are right out in the old aisle.

Tom Parkinson and Josh Williams, of Pitt; Buff Douelli and John Holohan, of Duquesne; Captain Johnny Dreshar, of Tech, and A. C. Edgecomb, athletic director at Geneva, were others on the speaking list.

After the banquet, the guests and speakers attended an informal reception tendered by Paddy Carr and his son, Dr. Hugh Carr. Paddy had eaten sauer kraut and drunk some buttermilk, and did the receiving in bed, but a good time was had by all.

The Tip-Off

It is too bad Loyola didn't wait to take one on the button until next Saturday night, when the Dukes would have been tickled pink to have obliged.

Tech is going to present a dashing football appearance next fall. New uniforms have been selected, the crimson jerseys which have been in use so long, will be discarded, and white ones, with red rosin stripes and shoulders, substituted.

Helmets will be white with red cross bands and the shoes will be red with white laces. Red and white socks, or none at all, will be effected by the Skibos.

It is hinted that Wally Steffen will wear a red derby to carry out the color scheme, shoving his black one. Bob Waddell may buy a fireman's hat.

Nitwit Thriller Feature On Radio Tonight

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

PROF. MUSCLEBOUND, that ignominious gentleman of Nitwitville, will do a running broad jump from the pinnacle of Washington Monument as the piece de resistance of WJAS at 9 o'clock tonight.

Mary Brian and Richard Arlen, movie sweethearts, present a short sketch during the 10 o'clock Paramount-Publix Hour, another WJAS feature.

"Juanita" and "The Old Oaken Bucket" will give the Aladdin Entertainers, KDKA at 8:30, a sentimental touch.

In an imaginary visit to Siberia, Earl Spicer, tenor, will sing a Chaliapin arrangement of the "Song of the Volga Boatmen," as a Fuller Man feature, KDKA at 7:30.

Eighteen hundred miles from the William Penn studios of KDKA, Dr. George Sutton, of Pittsburgh, will tune in on short waves tonight at 11:20 to hear his mother, Mrs. Lola M. Sutton, of Bethany, W. Va., play two piano selections especially for him. She will deliver a message of encouragement and cheer to her son, who is studying bird life in the isolated regions of the Far North.

The concluding opera of the season will be broadcast from the Chicago Civic Opera House. Parts of acts two and three of "Lucia Di Lammermoor" will be heard in Pittsburgh at 10 o'clock through KDKA.

It is interesting to note that this is the first of a series of jumps to be made from high points in every important city in the United States by this distinguished character.

Tax Refund Denied In Given Estate

A claim for a refund from the government of $17,187.91, with interest from December 24, 1920, by Arthur E. Braun and George C. Moore, executors of the estate of Thomas Hartly Given, was denied in an opinion handed down by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker.

This sum was a tax paid on $100,000 executors' fees in the estate of the former banker. The government had previously allowed deductions by the estate of $400,000 executors' fees, but denied the claim for deduction of $100,000 on the ground that it was the expenses incurred in earning income for the estate, and therefore not deductible from the estate.

MAX POLLAK, VIENNESE ARTIST, AND MRS. POLLAK

Pollak Here, to Depict City as He Sees It

By PENELOPE REDD

Max Pollak has come to look at Pittsburgh. Presently we shall see, in etching, the Pittsburgh he discovers. He contemplates the lure of old cities like Vienna and youthful cities like New York through immutably romantic eyes; but he adapts his flexible technique that his deft needle may portray their divergent elixirs.

Theodore Driesel selected eight of Pollak's etchings of New York for his new book "My City of New York." Pollak says New York is the great echo [illegible] of Amer[illegible]. The skyscrapers themselves and seams for swiftly passing pedestrians to glimpse with absorbed glances.

Penelope Redd

"The young girls with sanguine expectation in their countenances and moving with animative carriages, are figures demanding artists to capture them pictorially ere they pass on and into time.

"America today is the core of the world's interest in art. The galleries where current exhibitions are being shown are filled with intelligent amateurs impelled by a zest for art knowledge.

"The museums in every American city which I have visited are crowded with children eagerly studying the art of both living and remote civilizations."

Max Pollak will make a portrait of Ellen, the young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Kaufmann while he is here.

His portraits are indeed notable. One of his strong characterizations is that of Dr. Freud, the Viennese psycho-analyst whom he etched. Dr. Freud is surrounded by his ancient Egyptian sculptures, of which he has the finest private collection in Europe. Dr. Freud had Pollak make a drawing of "Oedipus Coming to the Sphinx," an allusion close to the crux of his theories.

BORN AT PRAGUE

Pollak, born at Prague in 1886 was taken as a child to Vienna. He entered the Fine Arts Academy where he won the prize for a resident art scholarship in Rome. He abandoned Rome, however, in favor of Holland, where the softer light was more to his taste for etching.

The Emperor Franz Joseph, upon seeing Pollak's etching of the "Old University and Old Jesuit Church in Vienna" promptly purchased six prints to be hung in his favorite castles.

Pollak has made etchings of all the great modern dancers, Russian, Swedish, German and American. It is in these captive fragments of evanescent grace that one perceives Pollak in his idiomatic expression. They state directly his unaffected concern for beauty.

Mrs. Leon Falk, of Woodland road, will be at home for Mr. and Mrs. Pollak tomorrow from 4 to 7 in the afternoon for her friends and for all patronse of art.

Max Pollak's exhibition will be shown at the Gillespie Gallery from Monday, February 3, through February 8.

TAMES JUNGLES VISITS HERE

Dr. Daniel Davenport, the only white survivor of an expedition started five years ago into the heart of the West Coast African jungles in search of a cure for sleeping sickness, has arrived in Pittsburgh.

Dr. Davenport brings with him two of the natives of the jungles who carried him more than 100 miles after the explorer had been bitten by a cobra. The blacks are marked on their foreheads and faces by deep knife cuts, it being the tribal custom to carve deep gashes into the faces of the youngsters and then rub mud into the wounds so that these will infect and cause deep scars.

The doctor, who is exhibiting motion pictures of the expedition, plans to make another trip to the jungle within a few months. He visited Mayor Kline yesterday.

WOMAN ROBBED, PUT OUT OF CAR

State police and authorities of several Western Pennsylvania counties today were searching for a red-haired woman and a man, who late yesterday left Mrs. Mary Grey, 34, of Chicago, and her two children stranded on the highway near Greensburg after robbing the woman of $300.

According to police, Mrs. Grey and her children had driven from Chicago with the man and woman having answered an advertisement inserted by the woman for a companion to make an automobile trip east. Yesterday when the machine reached the outskirts of Greensburg the man drew a revolver and demanded Mrs. Grey's money.

The red-haired companion, police say, took Mrs. Grey's purse and then ejected her and her children from the car. The mother and children walked several miles before they met a motorist who took them to the state police headquarters.

CASTING THE FIRST STONE

LOCAL first-nighters probably are preparing for another good cry on the night Fred Stone makes his comeback in Ripples. Audiences have already wept as much as they cheered at three Stone premieres. The first time they sobbed was when Fred made his first appearance without his partner, Dave Montgomery. The second time when "Stepping Stones" premiered and Dorothy Stone made her initial appearance with her Pop. Fred had remarked: "I hope I am forgiven for going back on my word that I would never have another partner after Dave passed away," and the last time they wept was during the "Three Cheers" engagement. Stone crashed in a plane and was in the hospital. And when Dorothy filled her father's 10 o'clock spot "down in one" in her pappy's hick clothes and went into his famous eccentric dance, every handkerchief in the house came into view.

THE RETORT PROPER

"THERE are two kinds of dramatic critics," someone once said to George Jean Nathan, "destructive and constructive. You are destructive!"

"Huh-uh," replied Nathan, "and there are two kinds of guns—Krupp and pop!"

IN FEWER WORDS

Seen on the wall of a 54th Street speakeasy: "Wicked women are responsible for half the troubles in the world. Virtuous women are responsible for the other half."

YOU'VE MET THE TYPE

They are telling about the chap who hastened into a kosher restaurant on the East Side and instructed the waiter to bring him a demi-tasse.

The waiter brought a large cuppa-cawfee.

"I distinctly told you," bellowed the exasperated customer, "that I wanted a demi-tasse—a small cup of coffee!"

"So wot are you getting hax-cited," responded the waiter indifferently, "can't you drink a little?"

OBSERVATION

WHEN we saw him with her again last night we wondered why we never thought of making a par..graph out of it before. His name is Philip Rosen, a powerfully b..lt youth, whose activities in th insurance world have won for him great distinction. He is a concrete example of the Man About Town, a good spender, a heavy tipper and he is mad about the tango, having once made a trip to the old country to polish up on the tango rou..ne.

He goes out with this mo..e..s or that beautiful woman. This chorus girl or that show personage and makes the better class night clubs as well as the so-called dives.

But he is the most different Broadwayward man of them all. He actually finds time once every week to do what very few other lads ever think of doing. No matter how beautiful the sirens are, he snubs them on a certain night in the week to take his mother out!

THE PITY OF IT

WHAT with this tale and that one about the Road being shot to pieces, an advance agent offers this concrete example of how dreadful show business is in the hinterland. One troupe which was losing members of the cast in every port because they were wary of being paid off in promises was in a small Montana town, booked for a one-night date. One of the hams was peeking through the curtain's peephole and counted eight customers.

"How's the house?" asked the leading lady.

"We're still in the majority," was the sad retort.

A SAD, SAD STORY

It appears that the critical opinions in the newspapers on the shows are taken seriously, after all. One of the cut-rate ticket chiefs was arguing along these lines the other day and remarked: "Why, I can remember when we could shove a ticket for any play into the hands of the bargain-counter mob and they would grab it. Now, when we have to force some of the shows, the wiser mob tell us that they read the reviews on that one, and the notices weren't so hot." Yes, indeedy, the critics are not making it easy for even when they do rave on a show the show's management doesn't need our help and so we don't get any tickets."

QUITESO, QUITESO

A NEWCOMER to journalism was being complimented on this and that, yet he remained dejected. "Oh," he oh'd, "I am unhappy working on a paper that is ridiculed. I always aspired to write for the better journals and magazines."

"You've got the wrong slant," someone interrupted. "Don't forget Finley Dunne's advice to one of America's better commentators. Dunne said: 'Don't ever bother about the dignity or importance of the medium for which you write. It doesn't matter a damn where your stuff appears so long as it is good. If it is good the right people are sure to see it.'"

IT RUNS INTO MONEY

Among other favorite anecdotes of Grover Whalen, the police commissioner, is the one about the gunman who was up before the magistrate for killing a man. The judge was horrorstruck by the brutality of the crime. "You knew very well," said his honor, "that your victim was shabbily dressed and was poor. You yourself admit you shot him down from behind to rob him and yet all you got for killing him was a dollar."

"Well, your honor," alibied the tough guy, "you know how it is—a dollar here and a dollar there."

State Election Laws Scored by Professor

The entire Pennsylvania code of election laws should be rewritten and simplified, Dr. Joseph P. Harris, professor of political science in the University of Wisconsin, told the League of Women Voters at a meeting in Carnegie Music Hall yesterday.

"The entire assessment and registration in Pennsylvania, especially in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh is full of fraud," he declared.

He advocated the enactment of legislation requiring the signature of a voter who requests a ballot.

Aged Man Rescued From Burning Home

MERCER, Pa., Feb. 1.—John B. Page, 72, of Stoneboro, was rescued from his bedroom by a neighbor when a heated brick which he was using to warm his bed set fire to the clothing. Mrs. Page was awakened by smoke, but was forced to flee before she could awaken her husband.

James Bomgartner, a neighbor, rushed in to the house and carried Page to safety. Page's condition is said to be serious. Slight damage was done to the home.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES

DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

TRY your hand at this fascinating game of Anagrambles, the game that is taking the town like the crossword puzzle craze took the whole nation for a ride through the dictionary.

The game is quite simple. Merely change the following words by the addition of the single letter indicated. Do not omit any letter of the original word. The letter may be inserted at the beginning of the word, anywhere within the word, or at the end. Thus, the word "pate," by the addition of the letter "l" becomes either "pleat" or "plate." The word "drag" may be changed to either "grade" or "raged" by the addition of the letter "e."

The original word must be changed in meaning by the commentary letter. To change "mine" by adding "d" to form "mined," would be incorrect. Rearrange the letters of your word to change its meaning, not its tense or number. Take a pencil now and write in your newly formed word in the spaces provided.

Official Heads in Basket As Mr. Kline's Ax Falls

Remorseless, cruel, but, oh, so practical! That is politics, as was learned yesterday by many policemen and firemen, involved in wholesale dismissals and demotions, affecting high and low.

Men long in the service, whose seniority entitles them to retire on pensions, "resigned" by request. "What can I do?" one victim of Mayor Kline's ax commented. "They make you retire."

Thus the ax of the mayor fell. The greatest shakeup in the bureaus of police and fire was on. Predicted for days as the result of conferences following revelation of the now well-known attitude of Mayor Kline—"to the victor belongs the spoils"—it nevertheless had a jarring effect when the first dismissals made public gave notice that no mercy was to be shown to those who were "in bad" politically. The complete baldness of the motive of the proceedings was shocking. No pretension was made that the upheaval was "for the good of the service." That omission robbed the thing of comedy relief for the drama.

At the conferences preceding the execution of the ax sentences, the doomed men were placed on trial. Who were the witnesses? Not people on the beats where patrolmen walked. Not business men and other citizens whose properties are guarded by policemen and firemen. No one was called to ask if any of the accused were derelict in duty to the public.

Ward chairmen were called! Lieutenants in Mr. Kline's political machine! The question was not how the men had attended to their duty to the public, but how they stood in the matter of re-electing Mr. Kline to the position of mayor! If the ward chairman could not give a suspect a clean bill of health his official head was forfeited.

Remorseless, cruel, but, oh, so practical, is the way of politics, as we have it under the new machine.

Passage of Porter Bills Would Disable Dope Evil

Some day the powerful nations that control the world's dope supply may do something real to LIMIT that supply. That's a hope of a more or less remote future.

But IN THE MEANTIME Congressman Stephen Porter, of Pennsylvania, says that THIS nation can do something NOW to limit the DEMAND for dope in the United States—and that interests most vitally every mother and father, every teacher, every social worker.

This nation furnishes a large, profitable demand for the dope that other nations are willing to supply.

Congressman Porter has introduced into the House of Representatives two bills that would help cut down the dope demand, that would make it much more DIFFICULT for dope peddlers to supply the demand of our million or more addicts, that would SAVE from the terrible dope habit millions of boys and girls who form the FUTURE MARKET for the international dope ring.

Congressman Porter proposes the establishment of an independent federal narcotic bureau ADEQUATELY EQUIPPED to deal with this rising dope menace. In the past the federal fight against contraband narcotics has been poorly financed and therefore weak and altogether inadequate.

He proposes in his second bill to establish a closer supervision of the so-called "legitimate" agencies through which dope is distributed in this nation.

Under the terms of this bill physicians, druggists, dentists, manufacturers and others who are legally entitled to deal in narcotics would be licensed and the amount of narcotics in which they deal would be rigidly limited.

Limitation of narcotics distributed through "legitimate agencies" is SUPPOSED to be in effect now. But it is really a joke.

It is estimated that 20 tons of opium would meet the legitimate medicinal and scientific needs of the United States.

But in 1928 the Federal Narcotics Control Board allowed the distribution of 70 tons of opium in this country. Literally HUNDREDS OF TONS were consumed here.

Remember that a few GRAINS of this terribly dangerous stuff will wreck a human life.

Every honest physician, dentist, druggist and dealer would WELCOME a more rigid control of dope distribution in this country.

Every mother and father, every human being who realizes the menace of the dope evil, would welcome it—and welcome the passage of the Porter legislation in Washington.

Thorough-going legislation, such as Stephen Porter courageously proposes and thorough-going anti-narcotic EDUCATIONAL work, such as the HEARST newspapers have been carrying on for years, will help rid this nation of an evil that drags millions down to death and degradation WORSE than death.

What! No Spinach?

A Doctor Says So.

Dr. Morris Fishbein, noted medical editor, comes to the defense of the small boy who won't eat spinach. Merely because it contains one vitamin, he says, is no particular reason why it should be forced down unwilling throats, juvenile or adult.

Dr. Fishbein's iconoclastic utterance will upset many pet household theories. It is the first time that a recognized authority has stripped away some of the "bunk" that surrounds American diet.

No people in the world but ourselves make such an unhappy business of eating. Meals are served with a heavy garnish of scientific misinformation—so many calories of this, so many vitamins of that—solemnly swallowed, seldom digested.

It is time common sense entered the kitchen. Eating was not meant to be a penance. Properly practiced, it is the king of indoor sports.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Noise Is Power

WHEN New York is a noiseless city we predict that your lonely ear drums will pop out like telescopes looking for the horizon.

Noise is the diploma of our educations. New York builders are posting signs apologizing for the necessary noises. But they are hammering just the same.

"Bugs" Baer

There is no racket we enjoy better than a freshly-oiled flat wheel thumping a spring song without the springs. The next time you get your brakes relined we hope you use sandpaper.

The music of thirty million automobile horns is the largest orchestra ever directed in history. Europe claims that America is pitched an octave too high, but Europe forgets that noise is progress.

We went nuts in the quietest town in the world. That's Venice, a town that has never had a street paving scandal.

When a gondolier approaches a Venetian street corner he bangs his paddle on the water. Two slaps mean a left turn. Three slaps indicate full speed ahead. Any extra slaps mean mosquitoes.

We lay awake listening to the slapping until dawn. Then a fire engine came by with a hook and ladder crew slapping the water with soup spoons.

There is no noise we enjoy better than a riveting machine hamburging the serenity of the neighborhood. If New York ever tears down its elevated railroads nobody in the city will sleep.

The rasping of frozen elevated wheels on dangerous curves is music to urbanites. It's much better than a frog pond that has been wired for sound.

If noise didn't mean something then a Vermont checker champion would be getting more money than Paul Whiteman. Look at Rudy Vallee. He gives it to you through a megaphone instead of growing a beard and muttering in it.

The more racket you make the better off you are. People may beat a path looking for mouse-traps but there are more visitors listening to the lions at meal time in the city zoo.

You've got to get notice in this world even if it's in the shape of complaint blanks. The only way you can find out that you've got neighbors in New York is to play your radio after midnight.

So keep your city noisy and tourists will realize that it's important.

Wise Words

The Manchu Around the Corner

By Herbert Kaufman

NO winner is too great for defeat. Power is a CALL loan. Every conqueror meets his master. Tomorrow always packs a HARDER wallop than yesterday.

The newcomer studies the methods of the oldtimer—he profits by the experience of the man ahead, and begins his studies at the point where his model has ceased trying to do it BETTER.

There is no permanency to any leadership. Each wave of progress establishes a higher water mark. The standards that measure efficiency are raised every year. Contrast dwarfs past performances.

Imagination restlessly seeks further goals. The next idea is always bigger than the last. As soon as a record-maker sets a standard, it becomes the SCRATCH for a RECORD-BREAKER.

CHAMPIONSHIP is usually the forerunner of failure. The man in the front rank grows careless. Success flatters him into recklessness. Complacency dulls his initiative. He beholds no competitor AHEAD of him and can't locate his potential rivals in the mass behind.

The unknown plans and schemes with the advantage of anonymity. The figure in the foreground is handicapped by his very location. The eyes and ambitions of untold strugglers are focused upon him. The price of prominence is the penalty of the SPOTLIGHT.

The insolent opulence of Rome doomed the empire. No one tribe was potent enough to demote her, but the continuous onslaughts of Vandal and Goth and Hun finally sapped her vitality.

Cocksure and arrogant, her people ceased to maintain their vigilance, degenerated into flabbiness, become drawfed in physique and mentality and, in the end, the GIANT of races fell prey to RACES of giants.

EVERY epoch is signalized by the ascendency of subtler forces. Business as well as realms totter under the assaults of young blood. The creative impulse is far more vigorous than the RETENTIVE instinct. Those who MUST have, are stirred to sterner resolutions than folk who merely aspire to HOLD.

Success cannot be maintained longer than it is SUSTAINED by the qualities which PRODUCED it.

Opportunity lies as frequently in the weaknesses of withering institutions as in the development of unexploited fields.

Lloyds of London will insure anything EXCEPT leadership. Companies will match their percentage tables against fire, flood, storm and earthquake, but the expert does not exist who can figure a feasible plan to underwrite the stability of ability.

ALL individuals, all enterprises, are vulnerable to greater originality and fertility. The past cannot furnish so many competent ideas as the future.

You can't build high enough or strong enough to shut out the advancing stranger, educated in shrewder schools and equipped with sharper tools and better weapons.

The Great Wall of China was planned by engineers who could not foresee aviation or the discovery of dynamite.

They erected a fence to hold barbarism at bay, but it FAILED its purpose because the blueprints didn't provide a portal for the FREE passage of OUTSIDE information.

Wherever ELSE self-satisfaction confides security in locked gates, there's a MANCHU waiting around the corner to SWARM the barrier on an UNEXPECTED type of scaling ladder.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

I'VE told you the story of Dolly Glass . . . blind Dolly who operates a little beauty shop in Sonora, California, and by her cheer and courage creates a greater beauty than ever was evolved from creams and makeup. Great story, wasn't it? There's another story, which goes with it, which is perhaps even greater.

The darkness which came to Dolly must have brought even a bitterer blackness to Dolly's mother. She's one of those warm, generous ranch women . . . the kind that comforts every human for miles around. And what it must have meant to her to see the night come to her beautiful little girl—!

You know how mothers are, anyway . . . how they'll break their hearts, particularly over a hurt child . . . coddling it . . . protecting it . . . somehow finding care for their own heartache in such service. Well, I suppose Dolly's mother wanted to do that, too . . . wanted terribly to do just that. And it would have been simple enough to have built a wall of love around the child and create some sort of a substitute life for her, in her helplessness, there on that pleasant, peaceful Californian ranch. I suspect, that is what most mothers would have done . . . and been called blessed for doing it.

But that isn't what Dolly Glass's mother did. She didn't build a protecting wall about her . . . she didn't shut her away from life . . . or let blindness shut her away. Instead, she took the little, fumbling hand in her big, sure one . . . and she guided the little stumbling feet with her strong, steady ones . . . AND SHE LED HER OUT INTO LIFE AND MADE HER MINGLE.

She made her mingle with children who could see. She made her do the things those children do—hard things, making beds, washing dishes, putting them away, cleaning rooms and setting them in order, tending the hens, preparing fruit and vegetables, every sort of ranch chore that any other child could do. She made her play the games those other children played, and take their rough 'n' tumble and razzing. She made her enter into all the competitions at school—face the same conflicts. SHE MADE HER SPEAK AS THOSE OTHER CHILDREN SPOKE.

Today, when Dolly talks to you, she does not use the terrible, frustrated vocabulary of the blind. She speaks as seeing people speak. She tells you of the orchid and gold and rose she "saw" in last night's sunset, though she has lived in darkness for twenty years. She does not say these things consciously, "putting on an act." She speaks so naturally—BECAUSE HER MOTHER NEVER LET HER LEARN TO SPEAK IN ANY OTHER WAY.

There is a film across Dolly's eyes, but there is no film of bitterness or fear across her heart. Her mother never let that film start. She never let Dolly feel that her "difference" really mattered. She kept her feeling that she was part of the normal, healthy, happy world. She did this by making her mingle. And so today, Dolly is as much a part of the normal world as you or I . . . perhaps MORE a part!

Often, when I hear other mothers boasting about how their children can't get along without them.

When I meet grown men and women whose characters have been hamstrung by their dependence on their mothers . . .

I THINK OF THAT BRAVE WOMAN WHO WAS GREAT ENOUGH TO SET HER DAUGHTER FREE!

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

BOOK TWO Forms of Life.
CHAPTER SIX.
THE LOWLY AND MINUTE.
Sec. 1. Amoeba.

WE must plunge now into a world of creatures, nearly all minute, attaining only in exceptional instances such dimensions as to be seen with the naked eye.

It is a strange and exciting world. Its existence was hardly suspected until the seventeenth century, when Antony Van Leeuwenhoek, a Dutch draper, peered through lenses of his own making at drops of water and bits of cheese and the scrapings of his own teeth—indeed, at anything he could lay his hands on—and beheld for the first time, their curious inhabitants.

H. G. Wells

An enormous and vitally important branch of biological science has sprung from these observations.

Nowadays everybody has heard of "microbes," tiny insidious creatures, populating the earth with unseen multitudes. Because of their minuteness the smallest drop of water is a habitable world for them, and a few particles of decaying organic matter are enough to support a thriving microbe population.

They swarm in pools and puddles, in the moisture of the soil, in the moisture that clings to mosses and other plants. Their spores float everywhere in the air. If a few blades of straw or a little pepper or some other organic substance be added to water, and if it be left in a glass, it will be found in a few days to be teeming with these tiny creatures.

The number of men in the world today is about seventeen hundred millions, and the numbers of individuals in most species of the larger mammals are probably lower than this.

But microbes attain numbers almost beyond estimation, numbers that make such figures as these negligibly small.

The green color of stagnant ponds is due to microscopic organisms, individually too small to be visible; the color of the Red Sea is due to untold myriads of microscopic plants, "making the green one red."

There are microbes which invade our bodies and rack us with a variety of diseases, there are others which are not enemies but indispensable friends. And aside from its practical importance there is beauty and wonder in the micro-world.

Abundant in the greenish, apparently lifeless scum that accumulates at the bottom of most ponds, water-butts and the like is the curious, elementary little creature known as Amoeba.

It is a speck of a transparent jelly-like substance, about one hundredth of an inch long, showing very little organization.

It is a creature vastly more simple than any that we have hitherto considered. It has no tissues, no definite organs; no heart, no brain, no stomach, no kidneys, no bones.

Except for two special structures that will be considered in a moment, it is nothing but a spot of jelly without enduring form—but a jelly that lives—breathing by absorbing traces of oxygen and giving out traces of carbon dioxide, and moving about and feeding itself in a peculiar and characteristic way.

In this jelly two layers may be discerned, a comparatively opaque and very granular inner layer and a perfectly transparent outer layer, more solid in consistency than the inner.

This layering is not permanent; the substance of the two layers mingle and are turned into each other.

The creature moves by the contraction of the outer layer, which slowly squeezes in at the sides and back, and forces the inner layer forward, so that as we watch the granules may be seen to stream along with it.

When it gets to the front end, the inner layer becomes converted into the outer layer, and when it gets to the back the outer layer is absorbed into the inner layer, so that as the animal proceeds it is constantly being urged forward by the contracting outer layer. It crawls, so to speak, by being everlastingly squeezed out of its skin.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 1.—Fred Stone's return to the stage is an epic of heroism and unshakable faith. When he crashed to the ground in his first solo flight more than a year and a half ago he was carried to a hospital with the longest list of injuries ever recorded to a single person in medical annals.

He had one chance in a hundred of recovering but, so the surgeons said, no chance whatever of returning to the footlights. He was doomed to permanent invalidism. Yet only once during his long convalescence did his indomnitable courage falter.

That was when, hobbling about the room on crutches, he saw a pair of his old dancing shoes in an open closet. There was a quaver in his voice when to his wife he observed: "I wonder if I'll ever wear them again?" It was a fleeting doubt and he never mentioned it again.

Stone's "religious conversion" was first paged several years ago as news. As a matter of fact he has, since youth, been interested in the church. In circus days he was convinced of the power of prayer. To him there always was something more important than life, else why the sun, moon and stars?

His loyalty to his late partner Dave Montgomery has been one of the theatrical classics. Montgomery was a mediocre actor but the billing was always "Montgomery and Stone." It was thus they started out trouping as boys from St. Joseph, Missouri.

Time after time theatrical managers made enormous offers for Stone to drop Montgomery and "go it alone." Montgomery was slighting his work and showing up late at rehearsals. Stone's invariable answer to such suggestions was a firm: "The team is Montgomery and Stone."

His innate modesty is encompassed in the great ambition of his life—the stardom of his daughter Dorothy, which came true. Before the accident in the air took place he was arranging to appear in a play which would herald: "Dorothy Stone—supported by Fred Stone."

Stone is perhaps the most popular actor in the east, but his popularity is not geographical. He is deeply beloved in the west, particularly in towns where he lived as a boy—Colorado and Kansas. His father was an itinerant barber and, as a result, many towns claim the actor as a native. On a junket to California some years ago he stopped off at some of his old home towns. In each there was a parade for Stone. He prepared to greet the populace, but there was no one to greet. Everybody was in the parade.

Fred Stone never rested on a single laurel. While other stars, doing the same old thing in the same old way, have twinkled for a time and vanished, Stone has been expressing an actor's greatest asset—versatility. In his various shows he has featured bareback riding, ice skating, trick roping, acrobatics, sharp-shooting, knife-throwing, wire-walking, juggling and ventriloquism. He never repeated his routine from one season to another.

The stage could learn a wholesome lesson from Stone's insistence upon cleanliness in the spoken line. Nothing bordering on the vulgar is permitted in situations or dialogue, and even slang is taboo. In his contracts is a clause that he is to be the sole censor of anything he thinks will have a tendency to lower the moral tone of his production. Stone's closest confidant is Rex Beach, his brother-in-law.

The biggest laugh in any of Stone's shows was in his spectacularly sudden entrance in Tip Top. He shot upward through a trap door in the stage, accompanied by a loud explosion and clouds of foam. When he alighted on his feet, he grinned sheepishly at the audience and remarked:

"I put in one raisin too many!"

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

BEFORE you reached the new year you probably made some resolutions.

Among those things you resolved to do was to save more money than you did last year. This seems to be your annual resolution.

Every year you fail to carry out the program for savings and you find yourself month by month saying you will make up for it next month. But as the months come around there are other temptations to spend more than you should and you break away from your plan completely and try to forget you ever made a budget to fit your income.

Can't you see that you are heading for old age and nothing ahead to take care of you in the period when you may be helpless?

If you are sensible you won't wait to feel the pangs of bare necessity.

You will curb your expenses with a more strict rein.

You will go without rather than go in debt or cut into your savings.

You will try to get a reputation for sound judgment and sensible ideas that you carry out when it comes to putting money away for a rainy day.

Every time you make an expenditure of more than you can afford you are doing something you will later regret.
